Dear Alumni, Parents and Friends

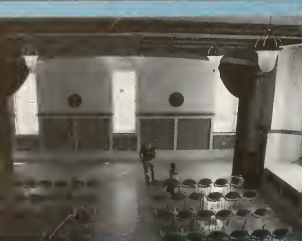

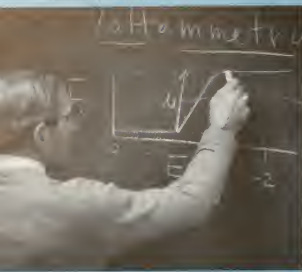

This past winter, Lycoming College was added to the list of Colleges of Distinction, higher education institutions characterized by "...engaged students, great teaching, vibrant community and successful outcomes." Lycoming is one of sixteen Pennsylvania institutions to make the list. Such external recognition again signals what the College community has known for some time — that Lycoming offers a quality liberal arts education to talented, committed students who are taught by full-time, highly credentialed and experienced faculty.

Lycoming students are engaged in their education. Small classes enable students to receive personalized attention. Each year, students across majors present their academic projects in a wide variety of forums: from the Senior Art Exhibition to students sharing their teacher education portfolios; from colloquia series in which students report their research to senior music recitals. Lycoming also provides a number of unique off-campus experiences to complement their class curricula. As an example, eight Lycoming College students spent their summer working on projects to improve seven area watersheds. The students are interns with Lycoming College's Clean Water Institute. In May, seven Lycoming College students interested in international business took a month-long, intensive European business trip.

First, they spent three weeks in the heart of London where they reviewed financial, marketing and management issues through visits to London's financial district, Deutsche Bank, CNBC/Europe and Dow Jones/Europe. After a weekend trip to Paris, they traveled for an additional week to Krakow, Poland, where they studied aspects of an emerging economy. Similar unusual experiences are to be found in the resumes of Lycoming's newest alumni. Many members of the Class of 2005 were accepted to competitive graduate programs, including those in such areas as business administration, immunology, student affairs administration, materials science and engineering, theology and medical school.

The success of our students while they are here and after graduation is impacted greatly by their working with our talented faculty. Lycoming faculty have always been known as dedicated teachers. Lycoming College recently honored 39 of our faculty members for professional accomplishments in their fields during the year. Among them, they authored 5 books and 48 articles or poems, participated in 27 off-campus artistic presentations, presented 15 papers at professional conferences, and received a total of 12 grants and awards. Of particular note, Dr. David Witwer, Associate Professor of History and the Chair of the History Department, was awarded a year-long full fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities. In addition to that prestigious fellowship, Dr. Witwer also received a Research Fellowship from the Gilder Lehman Institute of American History. This second fellowship will support Dr. Witwer's research at Columbia University's Rare Book and Manuscript Library.

The Summer Issue of the Lycoming Magazine introduced the Mary Lindsay Welch Honors Hall, an historic 1880's building on Fourth Street, just to the south of Skeath Hall. Originally built as a social hall by some of the leading families of Williamsport, the facility has been redesigned to include a state-of-the-art music recital/lecture hall and the offices of our United Campus Ministry, community service, and The Scholars Program. It also contains a lovely, intimate chapel which contains an original stained glass window from the chapel in Old Main.

This year two faculty members retired, each after thirty-five years of service to Lycoming. Dr. David Rife, Professor Emeritus of English, taught legions of students the joys, pleasures, mysteries and intricacies of literature. His love of his field has always been evident to those he has taught and to those with whom he has worked. His growing interest in recent years in the field of Jazz Literature has led him to become a bibliographical authority in that area. Dr. David Franz, Professor Emeritus of Chemistry, integrated the goal of student/faculty research into his classes, into his department and into the very unique design and structure of the Heim Building. The combination of the three has opened educational opportunities for the students he taught and for generations of students to come. Well-known for his chemistry lab rendition of The 1812 Overture, he is even more remembered as a devoted teacher, mentor and colleague.

Dr. John A. Radspinner, Sr., Professor Emeritus of Chemistry, passed away April 18, 2005, at his home. He joined the Lycoming College faculty in 1957 and retired in 1987. The Radspinner Scholarship was established by Dr. Daniel E. Hill '61 and other former students "...to honor and recognize this beloved member's thirty years of service to Lycoming College and its students." Dr. Frances Skeath, Professor Emeritus of Mathematics, passed away on April 28, 2005. Dr. Skeath's teaching career spanned 43 years, 32 of which she devoted to Lycoming College. Gifts were made in her memory to the J. Milton Skeath Endowed Scholarship Fund so that students can study at Lycoming.

As the cost of delivering Lycoming's quality liberal arts education continues to grow, the Annual Fund takes on greater and greater importance. As a supporter of our 2004-05 Annual Fund, you have played a vital part in helping Lycoming students receive an excellent educational experience.

Thank you for your generosity this year. With your support, Lycoming College will continue to provide brighter futures for our students today and for many years to come.

Sincerely,

J. E. Douthat

Lynn Jackson

Vice President
for College Advancement

Lynn Jackson joined the Lycoming College staff in August. She brings to Lycoming more than 25 years of experience in both the not-for-profit higher education sector and banking. She was on the development staff of Kalamazoo College for 14 years where she was part of Kalamazoo College's 21st Century Campaign, which raised $78 million—$13 million over goal. As vice president for advancement, she oversees development, alumni programs and college relations and is part of President Douthat's six-person cabinet. Ms. Jackson is a graduate of Western Michigan University.

Dear alumni and friends,

I am delighted to be a part of the Lycoming College family. I join Lycoming College already committed to the value of a broad based liberal arts education, having been a part of the development staff at Kalamazoo College in Michigan for 14 years, most recently as Executive Director of Development. For colleges like Lycoming and Kalamazoo, the challenges are very much the same: to ensure an enriching education for the next generation. Our job—both the development staff at Lycoming College and its alumni and many friends—is to provide Lycoming with the financial foundation it needs to continue its rise in stature and to make it affordable for all of its students. In my short time at Lycoming, I have been impressed by a “can-do” spirit on the part of the entire Lycoming community. Lycoming faculty and staff are people who reach out to students and the greater community. Lycoming students are people very much engaged in their own world of academics and co-curricular activities. And Lycoming alumni are people who make things happen in their communities and for their alma mater. I look forward to my time at Lycoming and to a great year ahead. This is a very exciting time for both me and the College. With your help, I know that we can achieve great things for this outstanding institution.

Sincerely,

Lynn E. Jackson
Vice President
for College Advancement

A MESSAGE

from the Director of Development

Each summer as we prepare the list of donors for this edition of the magazine, I am always overwhelmed by the generosity of Lycoming's alumni, parents and friends. The experiences made available to our students today are a result of the dedication and commitment of the thousands of people listed on the following pages. Whether a gift of $10 or $100,000, your contributions have a direct impact on our students.

Your gifts enable us to enhance academic programs, provide critical financial aid to those students worthy of a Lycoming education who are in need of financial assistance, erect new buildings, and renovate existing ones. From new books in our library, current software in our computer labs, to the electric bills that enable students to study into the wee hours of the night, light up the stage for a theatrical production, and announce the play-by-play at our sporting events; the sea of names that follows is the backbone of our institution.

I enjoy compiling these lists; and having done it for the past several years, I have come to recognize the names of loyal donors who continue to increase their annual support year after year. I have had the pleasure of coming to know a small fraction of you and I look forward to the new faces I will meet in the year ahead.

The College Advancement Division has welcomed several new staff members in the past year. If you receive a phone call one day from a member of our team requesting a visit, I hope you will take some time to talk with them about your Lycoming experience.

The database that holds the names of our 20,000 plus alumni, parents, and friends was converted to a new system this year. We have done our best to provide you with an accurate report, but we would appreciate your paying special attention to your name in our donor list this year. Please contact us if you notice an error as we would greatly appreciate your help.

Thank you for all you do for the students at Lycoming College. You help make Lycoming the fine institution that it is today and create new possibilities for the Lycoming of tomorrow.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Desmond Wilson
Director of Development

Lynn Jackson New Advancement Vice President

Lynn E. Jackson of Battle Creek, Michigan, joined the staff of Lycoming College as Vice President for College Advancement with responsibilities for fund raising, gift planning, donor relations, alumni relations and public relations. As a vice president, she serves as a member of the President's six-person Administrative Cabinet.

Steven Johnson, Health System CEO Gives Convocation Address

Steven P. Johnson, president and CEO of the Susquehanna Health System, welcomed the Class of 2009 as the featured speaker at the College's New Student Convocation on Friday, August 25, 2005. Johnson is a 1976 graduate of Lycoming College.

Originally from Bernardsville, N.J., Johnson majored in criminal justice at Lycoming College, a decision that may have begun with a required course in Social Anthropology that Johnson took with Professor Stan Wilk.

Johnson oversees the 300-bed regional medical center and health system that serves 15 counties with three campuses in Lycoming County, over 3,000 time, out-of-state students account for 38 % of Lycoming freshmen; a number that was only 17% as recently as 1998. This year's 368 freshmen come from 18 different states with hometowns ranging from Honolulu, Hawaii, and San Diego, California, to Chicago, Illinois; Memphis, Tennessee; New Orleans, Louisiana; and Austin, Texas.

James D. Spencer, dean of admissions and financial aid, credits the more national composition of the freshman class to Lycoming's growing reputation. "But these are also internet kids who find Lycoming College and are drawn to the Williamsport area or one of the College's courses of study."

While biology, business, English, and psychology remain popular majors with incoming freshmen, Lycoming's creative writing program has attracted many out-of-state students.

Lycoming's fastest growing major is its archaeology program. Spencer points out that Lycoming is one of the few colleges its size to have its own archaeology dig site in Cyprus.

Just 8% of the Class of 2009 is comprised of commuter students. Some 40% of Lycoming's new students expect to compete in varsity athletics; 38% plan to continue long-term involvement with volunteer community services; 27% will participate in one or more of the musical ensembles; and 12% plan to participate in theatre.

employees, 200 physicians, and a 139-bed Skilled Nursing Unit.

For the past 7 years, SHS has been recognized as one of the "100 most wired hospitals" of the nation's 5,000 medical facilities.

Johnson also serves on the Board of Visitors of the Institute for Management Studies at Lycoming College. In 2003 he was named Person of the Year by the Lycoming County Brotherhood and in 2005, he was named one of the 100 business leaders in North Central Pennsylvania.

Lycoming Students Working on Local Watersheds

"I'm having a great time. I got to canoe most every day on the Susquehanna River; I spend a lot of time outdoors; and there's lots of variety which keeps it interesting." Laura Lockard sums up her summer internship at Lycoming College, where she was one of eight students working on projects to improve the area's watershed.

The students are part of Lycoming College's Clean Water Institute, directed by Dr. Mel Zimmerman, professor of biology, who founded The Clean Water Institute in 1999. It is unique among small colleges.

The students worked on seven different watershed projects- in and around the West Branch of the Susquehanna River. Laura Lockard '05, Ephrata, Pa., conducted a water quality study of the West Branch from Lock Haven to Sunbury. Christy Bowersox '06, New Columbia, Pa., studied erosion. Tyler Machamer '08, Williamsport, Pa., assessed the dry hydrants of Lycoming, Sullivan, Tioga, Bradford, Wyoming, and Susquehanna Counties. Brandon Ford '06, Montoursville, Pa., collected data on two acid mine seeps. Amy Curry '05, Fallen Timber, Pa., completed the final plan of the Pine Creek River Conservation Plan. Lower down on the Susquehanna River watershed, Brad Musser '06, Mifflinburg, Pa., and Katie Swanson '07, Eldred, Pa., worked on physical stream assessment of the tributaries of Buffalo Creek. And, Allison Raymond '07, Edison, N.J., developed a website and stream restoration database.

Funding

Funding for the interns comes from a variety of sources including individual watershed associations. But a significant amount has come from the Growing Green Project, a state initiative through the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection. Since 1999, the CWI has received over $200,000 in grants of its own.

Business Students Get European Experience

Seven Lycoming College students who have an interest in international business were part of a month-long European business trip.

The students spent three weeks in the heart of London where they studied financial, marketing and management issues. They visited London's financial district, Deutsche Bank, CNBC/ Europe, Dow Jones/Europe and an advertising agency. After a weekend trip to Paris, they spent an additional week in Krakow, Poland, where they studied an emerging economy.

The trip, which was also a four-credit course, was team taught by Dr. Bonita Kolb, a marketing professor, and Dr. Mehrdad Madresehee, chairman of the economics department at the College.

Lycoming Begins Exchange Program with U.K. University.

Lycoming College has signed an agreement with the University of Westminster in London (U.K) to establish an exchange program between Lycoming College and the University's business school. Lycoming College students, particularly those majoring in international business, will now have the opportunity to study in London with no additional tuition charge. Westminster students will also be able to study at Lycoming College.

The North Carolina Chapter held its inaugural event under clear skies at Durham Bulls Athletic Park on August 26, 2005, with over a dozen alumni and guests in attendance. Tara (Hunter) Heller '99, Brenda Alston-Mills '66, and Robin (Newman) Straka '79 planned the event. In addition to the organizers, alumni Sara (Breese) Apgar '99, Judith Caris Young '86, Heather Jacobs '98, Pam (Fateenby) Roberson '98, and Neil Shipman '63 enjoyed sharing their Lycoming connections and taking in the AAA baseball action as the Bulls took on the Richmond Braves. Tara Heller reports that "everyone in attendance was very happy to connect with area alumni. No one thought that such a small school would have some 'roots' in the South!" The Chapter eagerly anticipates future events in other areas of North Carolina. View photos from this event at <http://www.lycoming.edu/alumni/events/260805NChaugEvent.htm>.

After Three Careers, Welcome to the Good Life

After four different careers, Steve Wolf decided last year that enough was enough. Upon graduating from Lycoming, Steve first went into public education and received his master's degree from Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton. After 17 years, he left teaching to pursue his hobby in horticulture, opening a landscape nursery with his wife, Nancy. He was nurseryman of the year twice with the Florida Nurseryman and Growers Association and chapter president.

In his spare time he attended the Dade County Police Academy at night and became a lead detective with the Metro Dade Sheriff's Department connected to the Agricultural Patrol where he dealt with agricultural theft. He retired from both after 20 years and was bored.

He then opened up a private investigative agency. One of his clients was Wells Fargo, later sold to Dunbar Armored. This took him throughout the world, working in international security. At one point he was in charge of the security of medical exams given to doctors all over the world who wished to practice in the United States.

Last year, Steve and Nancy, his bride of 46 years, moved from South Florida to Tavares in Central Florida. "If you point your finger in the center of the state, that's Tavares, the county seat of Lake County," he writes. They purchased a home on three acres with a pond, private woods, and a horse corral that he converted into garages and a workshop. Steve put in an orange grove and can now be found fishing in his pond, target practicing in his woods, working on his antique car collection, and looking forward to visiting places he has not been.

Steve and Nancy have three children and two grandchildren, all living in North Florida, a few hours from their new home.

He is looking forward to his 50th Reunion this year, joining Bill Hart and the other brothers of Theta Chi. He welcomes classmates to drop in when in the area and join him in the good life. SWolf32757@aol.com

"After many, many, many years of not returning to Lyco, a few of the Class of '74 Chemistry grads made it back to Homecoming last October for the 30-year reunion," writes Dave Farrell. "At that time, Dr. Dave Franz mentioned that he would be retiring after 35 years at Lyco. He started in 1970 along with the '74 Chem grads. So, when we received the notice from the Chemistry Dept. that a surprise celebration was in the planning stages, we

Postcard From India – Paul Fochtman Making a Difference

Wendy and Paul at a faculty event at the American School in Bombay.

It's a long way from the KDR lounge at Lycoming to the American School in Bombay, and the path has been a winding one for Paul Fochtman (business).

"I left Lycoming and held two positions in sales. While the money was good, I really found no value in what I was doing," writes Paul. "Not that sales doesn't have a great deal of value, it just didn't work for me. When I left Lycoming, I was well educated, yet I lacked the vision or passion for what I wanted to contribute to the world."

While waiting to start a job in pharmaceutical sales, Fochtman decided to visit his mother who was then Dean of the College of Nursing in Guam.

Guam was desperately searching for science teachers, and Paul had had some courses. "At that point it clicked, and I quit sales to become a teacher," he says.

At first, he worked under an emergency certification in Guam where he taught kindergarten. After certification, he became a chemistry and Advanced Placement economics teacher. The Department of Defense in collaboration with the Guam Department of Education offered to pay for his master's degree if he remained in Guam for five years. He subsequently became a department chair, then an assistant principal of high school of 3,600 students.

"I was able to manage typhoon shelters, and generally given a great deal of responsibility. Another fantastic experience in education!" says Paul.

While in Guam, he also met his wife, Wendy, who is originally from Minneapolis.

"I began thinking about my doctorate. Wendy and I returned to the U.S. to get married. While back home, I interviewed with several schools. I was hired as an assistant principal, and then one year later became a principal. I earned my degree in 1998 from the University of Minnesota - Twin Cities. From there, I was hired by the American Embassy School - New Delhi where I served as the middle and high school principal."

In 2004, Paul was honored as the National Distinguished Principal and invited to Washington, D.C.

Last year, Paul moved from Delhi to Bombay where he is the superintendent at the American School of Bombay (<http://www.asbindia.org/>).

The American School in Bombay is a U.S.-style school. The students, usually children of diplomats and those working in international organizations, represent over 35 countries and comprise a rich, multi-national community.

"It's hard to believe, but the tuition at ASB is over $20,000, so I am blessed with the ability to recruit the best teachers from the United States, UK, Canada, and France," says Paul.

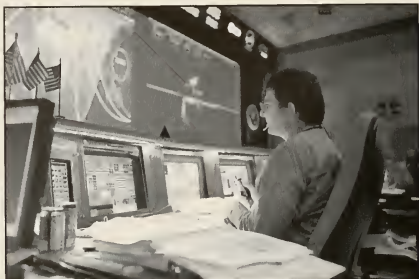

"I have two wonderful children: Jack starts our early childhood program in August and is three years old; Paige just finished kindergarten and is on to grade one next year."

"I've found a passion and feel like Wendy and I are making a difference. Life is great!" says Paul.

Can Impact the Future of Lycoming College

Your participation in the Lycoming Annual Fund - with as little as $10 - can make a huge difference in Lycoming's future. Because participation rate by alumni in a college's annual fund affects how foundations look at us when we pursue grants.

The percentage of alumni who make a gift to the Annual Fund is one of the factors used by foundations when awarding grant money. In addition, this percentage is also utilized by U.S. News & World Report when determining its annual college rankings.
