Part of what makes the Lycoming experience unique is the College's mission as a residential liberal arts college where the majority of students live on campus and are encouraged to participate in activities and in the development of a campus community. One reason, suggests Dr. M. Ben Hogan, Dean of Student Affairs, is because students find it is no longer enough to graduate with a diploma in hand. In a sea of degrees, a potential employer is looking for other qualities—accomplishments that suggest potential leadership skills and a sense of responsibility for the welfare of others.

Certainly there are more options for students than ever before at Lycoming. Lycoming students can participate in any of 50 different organizations, including five social fraternities and four social sororities, that together offer over 200 leadership opportunities.

One in five students participates in Lycoming's varsity sports program and another 20% participate in the College's active intramural recreational sports program.

Some of these organizations, such as the Choir and United Campus Ministries, date back two generations. Others, such as the Creative Arts Society and the Wilderness Club, are new additions.

Life at LYCOMING

Beyond the Classroom

"The encouraging aspect in the development of these new organizations is that they are being initiated by students to meet specific interests and needs," says Dean Hogan. These interests are supported by numerous staff and faculty advisors and funded through a student activities fee of $30 per semester.

The two-year-old Creative Arts Society is a good case in point. Peter Coughlin '96, an Dean M. Ben Hogan came to Lycoming College in the fall of 1992 with 17 years of administrative experience in higher education at four different colleges and universities in New England and New York. A graduate of St. Francis College (Maine), he received a master's degree from the University of Southern Maine and a doctorate from Vanderbilt University.

Dean Hogan

Hogan has taken a renewed and active view of student life. In summing his philosophy he says: "The institution is not a parent, however, students need to learn that they are expected to meet the standards and expectations of their community."

art history and history major who is president of the society this year, felt that Lycoming lacked something for him.

"There was no interesting environment for me," he says. Now, the Creative Art Society is one of the most active organizations on campus, putting on four or five events each semester. In the past year, the members have had student poetry readings, fiction readings, an acoustical show featuring original student music, and original one-act plays. They have taken in the Rembrandt exhibition at Pennsylvania State University and are planning a trip to New York City.

The society actually grew out of a "creative arts floor" that was established in Williams Hall, three years ago.

Mike Reaser '96, a commercial art major, was one of the first proponents of the floor as a way to exchange ideas. "I thought it would foster creativity," says Reaser. "Now, I have somebody down the hall I can show my art work to and get a good opinion. There is a real community to our floor."

Coughlin concurs. "It's like a family. It's comfy, it's homey and you can smoke in our lounge."

Dean M. Ben Hogan sees these activities and programs not as extra-curricular, but as "co-curricular." "I don't think there should be a dichotomy between work and leisure time," says Hogan. To this end, the Office of Student Affairs has tried to develop a partnership between student life and academic life.

Even life in residence halls has taken on a new dimension. To encourage new students to get to know professors outside the classroom, the freshmen residence halls of Asbury and Skeath have a faculty mentor for each floor. In the evening, a residence hall may have a faculty member talk about a hobby or a local black minister may lead a discussion on race relations as a way of marking Black History Month. This is part of what Dean Hogan terms residential education.

For Jen Alexiou '96 from Nanuet, New York, Lycoming's campus life is extraordinarily important. She has been president of her sorority, Gamma Delta Sigma, has served on the Panhellenic Council, was house manager of her sorority's floor, and works in the Admissions Office. These activities, she says, have "totally enriched my college experience." She feels that she picks up leadership skills and learns the dynamics of interacting with people with these activities. Plus, she adds, "I get a good feeling."

In her position, Jen finds herself also interacting with the administration. When she became president of her sorority, she dropped a note to President James Douthat. Much to her surprise, Dr. Douthat invited her into his office and discussed the role of sororities on campus for more than an hour. "We still communicate by e-mail," Jen marvels.

The lounge of the Creative Arts Floor in Williams Hall is a place for self-expression (on wall canvases) and to find friends with similar interests.

Jen Alexiou '96 works as a tour guide for the Office of Admissions between studies, sorority life and volunteer work.

A revitalized commuter student organization is addressing the needs of a group that has often felt disenfranchised. The group has a mentoring program, matching new students with veteran commuters, and their own tutoring program.

Because many of these students are non-traditional in age and often have young families, the organization has put together a series of family nights as well as a program to entertain young children during the several days of the academic year when Lycoming is in session but elementary schools are not. The organization's close working relationship with the administration has resulted in a new snack area.

THE STUDENT VOICE

Lycoming students are actively involved in the governance of the College. Students were part of the recent committee that studied and evaluated the entire curriculum. Search committees for new faculty members virtually always include a student. At the very highest level, the president and past president of the Student Senate are invited to the meetings of the Board of Trustees.

"It is very gratifying to see our students develop a social conscience and to act upon that conviction."

Hogan has taken student involvement in the administration of the College another step by hiring students as para-professionals. Criminal justice majors now work with security officers; pre-ministerial students act as peer ministers; nursing students work in health services, and others work as career consultants. Having students on staff is not only a learning experience for those students involved, it helps the College be more responsive to student needs.

"Students are more likely to turn to a peer in a time of need than to a professional staff member," says Hogan.

GROWING COMMUNITY SERVICE

Some student energy is going into community service. The most popular organization on campus, second only to the Lycoming Choir, is Habitat for Humanity, a volunteer organization that builds homes for low-income people. It now has 85 members.

In fact, students are contributing an estimated 12,000 hours of volunteer service a year, beginning with fall Freshman Orientation when the entire freshman class spends a morning or afternoon working at one of 22 non-profit organizations in the community.

Dean Hogan and Rev. Marco Hunsberger, campus minister, team teach Community Service 105 and 106, which can now be used to fulfill a graduation requirement that calls for two courses in physical education, wellness, or community service.

Fraternities and sororities have volunteer programs that are encouraged both by their own organizations as well as the College. Gamma Delta Sigma sorority runs the local soup kitchen on weekends; the Panhellenic Council (all-sororities) has set up an after-school tutoring program at a housing project. Tau Kappa Epsilon works with the Big Brother/Big Sister organization. Lambda Chi Alpha collects canned food.

Just before Christmas, Danielle Groblewski, a resident advisor, led her floor in soliciting Christmas gifts for specific children under the Salvation Army's Angel Program. The project resulted in wrapped gifts for 128 children.

Sophomores Matthew Beisch '98 and Brenda Bowser '98 are now in their second year of a four-year commitment as Pennsylvania Service Scholars (funded through the Americorps program). They created and now administer an after-school tutoring program that enlists the volunteer support of 45 Lycoming students. "It's really growing and becoming a wonderful project," says Beisch.

The two spend 10 hours a week not only working with children but also completing the government forms that go along with the funding.

"It is very gratifying to see our students develop a social conscience and to act upon that conviction," says Hogan. We take the view that education is a privilege and with that privilege comes a responsibility to give something back."

Naturally, there are a few problems on the way to students' personal development and social responsibility, Dean Hogan concedes. "The years between ages 18 and 23 are one of the most intense periods of student development: they are experimenting with establishing relationships, creating independent lifestyles, and dealing with authority."

The College has moved from merely attempting to control behavior to educating students about the responsibilities of community living.

Students now are no better or worse than they ever were, Dean Hogan feels. The problems are different.

Mark Britten, director of counseling, says

"The myth that college students are carefree is no longer true — if it ever was. These students have had a lot of life experience before they come here."

The College has moved from merely attempting to control behavior to educating students about the responsibilities of community living.

Mark Barner '97, a criminal justice major, works with security officer Michael Beauty as a para-professional in a new Lycoming program.

Denise Davidson, director of residence life, has initiated Community Agreements by residence hall floor in which the inhabitants come up with their own policies on such issues as noise, use of bathrooms, hallway cleanliness, and programmed activities. "We've been very pleased with these agreements," says Davidson, "and with the greater responsibility demonstrated by our students."

"When I see our graduates cross the flag court to receive their diplomas, I am proud of their total accomplishments here," says Dean Hogan. "I think we do an excellent job of graduating well rounded people who are able and willing to contribute to their communities in the future. That's what Lycoming is all about." ▲

The tutoring program started by two Lycoming College students was recently recognized by the Williamsport Area School Board. The program uses volunteers from both the College and the community.

Finding a New Campus

Voice

by Erica Dohner '96
President, Student Senate

Erica Dohner learns the art...

...of persuasion

...and compromise.

Editors note: When Erica Dohner became president of the Student Senate, she knew she would be busy. She didn't know she would get 11 p.m. phone calls from clubs requesting money, a grilling on why the Campus Board of Activities couldn't get a favorite band on campus, and pleas from concerned faculty and administrators to get more students involved in the cultural events of the community. The new Student Senate is dealing in very real politics.

my political career started in the 9th grade when I was elected as a representative to my high school student council. We met once a month and expressed our opinions, but the high school faculty never took us seriously. So I ended my student council career as quickly as I started.

When I arrived at Lycoming, I realized that the Student Association of Lycoming College (SALC) had a voice in College issues, so I ran for Treasurer of the Sophomore Class.

I discovered, however, that most of the time was spent in fund-raising. As class officers, we sold Lycoming cups and key chains to have enough money to put on an event or run a program. Unfortunately, financial class supporters were few and far between. We came away from the experience poorer than we started out and disappointed. That might have been the permanent end to my political career, but at the end of 1994, Dean Hogan proposed to the student government a mandatory student fee of $30 per semester.

The association passed the Student Activities Fee which changed everything. For the first time, SALC would have nearly $83,000 that would be allocated to student clubs and organizations, letting them concentrate on programs and activities rather than fund-raising. And the student association would have the responsibility for allocating the money.

This windfall prompted SALC to write a new constitution that granted voting rights, spelled out the duties of each officer, and defined allocation rules for the money.

As President of the Junior Class, I was a member of the first Budget Committee of the new Student Senate of Lycoming College (SSLC). Our first meeting ran for four hours as we considered each request, using as criteria how the organization would use the money to benefit the entire student body. Under this process, one organization can receive more money than another.

A break in classes outside the Academic Center. Lycoming life outside class contributes to the Lycoming experience.

At the end of my junior year, I was elected president of the Student Senate of Lycoming College, a rewarding but highly stressful job.

Most of my week revolves around preparing for my Monday night meetings or sitting on boards and committees. I represent the students for the Board of Trustees, the Alcohol Committee and much more.

A day never goes by that I don't get a call from one of the campus organizations with a problem, faculty or staff wanting to address a campus issue, or e-mail from anyone who has an opinion. The cycle of people contacting me never ends, and everyone wants an immediate answer.

I have to deal with issues that can range from the alcohol policy to the dining service. Overall, I do try to find the time to conquer the important issues that the students express. When students were concerned about not having a concert this fall, we set up a presentation to inform the student body on how much preparation and money is involved in putting a concert together.

In order to keep my sanity, I delegate various service projects, traditional class events, and the overseeing of campus events such as Homecoming.

On the other hand, the job of president is very rewarding. I am learning how the administrative side of a business—such as this institution—is run. This should help me in my future career in public relations. Another reward is the satisfaction of changing or influencing policies and having an impact on the College.

The Student Senate can't change everything that the students don't like about the College, but we certainly try. I think that it is very important for students to be able to express their feelings, and the Senate provides them with the opportunity to have a voice on college issues.

As the year moves on, I will continue to represent the students of Lycoming College. My most important objective for the students is that I continue to be an effective liaison between the administration, faculty and my classmates. ▲

10. Movies on Campus...
 Movies are shown nearly every Friday, Saturday, and Sunday in the Heim building. The movies, sponsored by the Campus Activity Board, are recent theatrical releases.

9. Surfing the 'Net...
 With access to the World Wide Web through Netscape in the computer labs and from some residence hall rooms, students are roaming the Internet for information and entertainment.

8. Jack's Corner...
 Comfortable alternative to the cafeteria during meals with TV, pool tables, and video games. In the evening, JP's offers good food at reasonable prices. Concerts and other events light up the weekends in Jack's.

7. Julie's Coffee Shop...
 Cozy environment and good coffee and desserts at moderate prices. Nestled in the downtown and within walking distance from the campus.

6. Sports on the Quad...
 Baseball, frisbee, football, lacrosse, soccer, and even golf! On a warm, sunny day the Quad is packed and

5. Fourth Floor of the Library...

If you have to study, you might as well do it in the most secluded place in the library. It's quiet most times. Other times it's a social haven. If studying gets boring, you can always take a break to read the tables.

4. Skyline Drive... The best place to get a scenic view of Williamsport and get away from it all in the great outdoors.

3. Denny's... The only place to go for a cup of coffee or a snack at 3 a.m. Unfortunately, a car is necessary.

2. Wendy's... Close enough to campus to grab a quick meal when you've missed the cafeteria's hours or can't take another chicken fillet. And there's always Two Boys and China Palace.

10. Crystal Ball. .Biggest dance of the year. Men wore tuxedos and women wore gowns.

9. May Queen Festivities . .May Queens would be crowned and dances and festivities surrounding May Day were held.

8. Milo's Sub Shop. . . Sandwich shop downtown on Market Street between Third and Fourth Street where everyone would hang out in the evenings.

7. George's Coffee Shop. . .A great place off Fourth Street for coffee and doughnuts in the mornings for students and faculty. The signed class year numbers that now reside in Jack's Corner started there.

6. Downtown Activities. . . Stores, shops, ice cream parlors, and other attractions were plentiful in the downtown area.

5. Kline's. . .A favorite downtown watering hole.

4. Fraternity Competitions. . .All kinds from floats for Homecoming to dances

3. Cabin Parties. . .Parties hosted by fraternities and others at cabins off-campus.

2. Sneaking out. . .With a 10 p.m. curfew for the "ladies," women found inventive ways to sneak out without getting caught.

1. Snack Bar. . .Located in the former gymnasium (now the fine arts building) where students could get snacks and food. ▲

6. Intramural Sports. . . Students enjoyed participating in a variety of intramural sports like volleyball, basketball and others.

5. Hanging Out on the Quad. . .Sports, games, fun, and friends were common on the quad.

4. Streaking. . .A popular thing of the seventies where students would strip and streak across campus.

3. Stunts and Dares. . . Volkswagens driving across the quad and other spectacles kept things interesting on campus.

2. Local Color. . .Hot spots of the seventies included the Caboose, Carl's, Kelly's, and Brandon Cafe.

1. Keg Parties. . .Despite regulations, keg parties both on and off-campus were the top social gatherings.

In the 1950s, the place to meet was the Snack Bar in the basement of the gym.

Fifty years ago, a dusty discovery in the attic of the Old Main sparked a debate over the role of women on campus. Writers of the 1948 Lycoming Courier newspaper found a photograph of two females in their dorm room at the turn of the century. This led to research of the policies and procedures that governed women at the college.

The resulting 1948 newspaper article showed the contrasts between the environment of the College at the turn-of-the century and the more relaxed environment of fifty years later. By today's standards, the rules even then seem strict and burdensome.

Times have definitely changed for women at Lycoming over the years. Since the early days of coeducational colleges, the policies and standards governing women's behaviors and interaction with their male counterparts have evolved.

At the turn of the century, women were forbidden from speaking with the opposite sex when they saw them on campus. There were penalties for infractions such as note passing or violating the speaking rule.

"Any offending student may be punished, according to the nature of the offense, by private or public reproof, suspension, dismissal or expulsion," said the 1903-1904 Catalogue. Women were also not allowed to leave the campus without permission, were never allowed callers at their rooms, and were chaperoned to and from church, entertainments, games, and trains.

By Bonnie Penman '96

A LOOK BACK

Women Campus

"Although these rules seem ridiculously rigid now, they were undoubtedly considered lenient in their day," the 1948 Lycoming Courier continued.

Interaction between the sexes was only permitted one evening a week set aside for callers to the women's dormitory. After dinner, gentlemen were allowed into the receiving room where the ladies would appear for three minute chaperoned visits, according to the Courier. Later, this was changed to two evenings a week for fifteen minutes at a time.

By 1948, the women were allowed callers to their dormitory every night of the week after dinner until 8:00 p.m. They were also allowed to go out on Friday and Saturday evenings, as well as be sociable at all times.

The Lycoming Courier staff hoped their informal comparison would be continued again some time in the future.

"The two pictures that are used in this comparison will now be carefully tucked away in some corner of the attic of Old Main, and perhaps, fifty years hence, some member of the Courier staff, say Lycoming '98, may make an even more detailed comparison for the benefit of the students of the future," the article said.

Perhaps, having stumbled across this article much like the staff in 1948 stumbled upon the 1903 picture, the comparison can continue.

Those women in the class of 1948 may be heartened by the fact that their granddaughters in 1996 enjoy the same privileges as the men. Only Rich Hall remains an entirely female residence hall. Every other residence hall on campus is coeducational, either by floor or by suite.

All students also enjoy 24-hour visitation, which means anyone can have guests of either sex in their rooms at any time they wish. This freedom creates an open environment for both sexes to exercise the same rights and follow the same policies.

"I can have friends over to visit anytime it's convenient, not just during a set period of time," said Christianne Vaughn, a junior art history major.

Denise Davidson, director of residence life at Lycoming, explained the new policy includes requirements for escorting visitors in the building and registering any non-students with the Department of Safety and Security.

Davidson says the policy seems to have helped students, especially incoming freshmen, to see each other more realistically. "There are more men and women who have platonic relationships than in the past," said Davidson. She credits those relationships to making the residence halls co-ed and allowing visitation.

Noting the cyclical nature of social conventions, Davidson said that somewhere down the road policies could revert to the old role of the College as parents. "Student affairs on campuses in the fifties were very protective," said Davidson. "Who knows, in another fifty years, it may swing back toward that."

Evert Quad and Gates Dedicated

Lycoming College dedicated a new gate and quadrangle in honor of Dr. Samuel H. Evert '34 and his wife, Dorothy, of Bloomsburg and North Palm Beach, Florida, for their service and support of the College. The dedication ceremony took place on Saturday, Nov. 4, during Parents' Weekend. The gate gives the College a west entrance on Mulberry Street at Ross Street. The Evert Quadrangle lies between the Heim Biology & Chemistry Building and the Academic Center, bounded by Mulberry Street and College Place.

Dr. Evert, who grew up in Kulpmont, Pa., graduated from Dickinson Seminary and spent a year at the University of Pennsylvania, leaving to work in the family lumber business.

He founded the construction company, S. H. Evert Co., Inc., in 1941, and ran the company until his retirement in 1976. The construction company was responsible for major construction at Penn State University and Susquehanna University as well as a large number of hospitals, factories, and schools in Central Pennsylvania.

He became a member of the Lycoming College Board of Trustees in 1969 and subsequently served in a leadership role on the Buildings and Grounds Committee where his building experience was of great value to the College. In fact, his vision led to the construction of the Fine Arts Center, the Physical Education facility, and the Heim Biology and Chemistry Building.

In 1988, Evert received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Lycoming for his outstanding service and leadership.

Evert is married to the former Dorothy Wallen of Palmerton. They have four children, 10 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Lycoming College Receives Award for Service

Lycoming College's Freshman Service Project has been recognized by the Middle Atlantic Region of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators as a winner of the association's 1995 Innovative Award.

Developed two years ago, Lycoming's

Freshman Service Project places more than 350 freshmen in a half-day of volunteer service at 25 different sites in Lycoming County as part of the Freshman Orientation Program.

The program serves as an introduction of freshmen to both the community and to the idea of community service as a part of community life.

The program was designed by Mrs. Mary Wolf, assistant dean for freshmen, and Rev. Marco Hunsberger, campus minister.

The Middle Atlantic Region is comprised of colleges and universities in the five Middle Atlantic states of Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia as well as Washington D.C.

The Clothesline at Lycoming College was organized by Mark Britten, director of counseling services, with the help of Dr. Kathryn Ryan's classes in Introduction to Psychology and Psychology of Women, members of sororities as well as a number of independent students.

The students designed color-coded T-shirts and hung them on a clothesline set up in the Academic Center. A "black" shirt testified to general violence against women; red, pink or orange shirt represented a survivor of rape or incest; lavender denotes a person attacked because she is lesbian; while a white shirt bears witness to a person who died from relationship violence.

The Clothesline Project was founded in the summer of 1990 at a meeting of the Cape Cod Women's Agenda and has been gaining national support. Lycoming's clothesline was pictured in the Chronicle of Higher Education.

Sylk Collection Debuts

The pride of Philadelphia's artists was on exhibit in the Lycoming College gallery this fall. The exhibit was part of The Sylk Collection, a private art collection of Barbara Lovenduski '73 and Leonard Sylk who have been collecting art together for over 20 years.

For the show, the Sylks selected 18 paintings produced over the last 40 years, all by artists from the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. As Philadelphians, they have become friends and admirers of many of the artists at the Academy where both have devoted considerable time as board members. Barbara Sylk also has been very active in the Philadelphia art scene as a gallery owner.

Their collection features some of the best contemporary artists from the Greater Philadelphia area, notes Roger Shipley, chair of the Lycoming College art department.

Alfred D. Kohler is Remembered in Lycoming College Scholarship

Alfred D. Kohler spent the last ten years of his life pursuing a dream he had delayed for 60 years. After a career as a music educator and administrator, Kohler indulged in his love for art by taking every studio art course offered by Lycoming College—some of them several times.

Prof. Roger Shipley of Lycoming recalls Kohler as “a wonderful addition to every class he took. He was always perceptive and students enjoyed his friendliness and willingness to talk.”

When Kohler died last summer as a result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident, the Lycoming College art department wanted to remember his love of art. This fall the friends of Alfred Kohler established the Alfred Kohler Studio Artist Award Fund. Income from the fund will be awarded to a student majoring in studio art with the money designated for art supplies. Purchasing art supplies, Shipley points out, is a major financial commitment for students. A set of basic oils or acrylics can cost $150. Watercolor paper, alone, can cost $6.00 a sheet.

Persons interested in supporting the Alfred D. Kohler Artist Award Fund can make their gift by sending a check payable to Lycoming College, Box 165, Williamsport, PA 17701. All gifts are tax deductible.

Each year, the Distinguished Nurse Lecture brings to campus a nurse who has distinguished herself or himself in the field.

Violinist Teams with Dr. Gary Boerckel

Internationally-acclaimed violinist Gregory Fulkerson performed a program of masterpieces with local pianist Gary Boerckel in the fall.

For Fulkerson and Boerckel, the concert was one of six stops on a two week tour of Pennsylvania and Ohio which included concerts at Mansfield University, Lock Haven University, Cabrini College, Ashland University (Ohio) and Oberlin.

The two met as undergraduates at Oberlin College. Fulkerson, now a professor of violin at Oberlin College, has an active performing career.

Gary Boerckel is chair of the music department at Lycoming College. In addition to his teaching, he maintains an active performance schedule as a classical and ragtime/jazz pianist.

Information Professional Speaks

Bonnie Lawlor, chief executive officer of Advanced Research Technologies, spoke on “Information Technology and the Future of Business.”

Lawlor discussed how information technology has evolved, the current state of information technology and what has to be done to make the promise of the information highway a reality. She also addressed the many issues that have not yet been satisfactorily resolved such as protection of data ownership, privacy, security, data validation, and archiving.

The speech was part of the Executive Lecture Series sponsored by the College’s Institute for Management Studies.

Vice President of Maryland Company Speaks at Lycoming College Accounting Banquet

Charles S. Williams ’79, senior vice president and general manager of U.S. Business Interiors, a $40-million Maryland-based company, spoke at the annual banquet of the Lycoming College Accounting Society in December.

Williams's career has spanned both sides of the globe. A native of Lock Haven and a 1979 magna cum laude graduate of Lycoming College where he won the Chieftain Award, he began his accounting career at Price Waterhouse and subsequently served as financial manager of Longines-Wittnauer Company (the watch company) before becoming the director of operations for Dominos Pizza in Australia.

Returning to the states, he became Director of Operations for Van Grack, a spin-off company of Nike, which sold warm up suits. He joined U.S. Business Interiors in 1989.

UNI-MARTS CEO Speaks

The CEO of Uni-Marts, Inc., Henry D. Sahakian, spoke to economic students in November. Sahakian, who was featured in Fortune Magazine, is considered one of northcentral Pennsylvania's most successful entrepreneurs. The son of Armenian parents, he came to the United States from Iran in 1956. After receiving a degree in electrical mechanical engineering from The Pennsylvania State University, he entered the real estate and construction business in 1962. He opened his first Uni-Mart convenience store in 1972.

Headquartered in State College, Uni-Marts now owns and operates 417 convenience stores throughout Pennsylvania, Virginia, New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland. The company has over 3,000 employees with annual sales reaching over $326 million a year. Each store typically carries over 3,500 items.

Mr. Sahakian has been a Trustee of Lycoming College since 1992 and currently serves on the Board's Finance Committee.

Girl Scouts Explore Science at Lycoming College

More than 120 Girl Scouts from the Hemlock Girl Scout Council explored astronomy, biology, chemistry, engineering, and physics in November at Lycoming College. The girls looked at faraway galaxies in the Detwiler Planetarium, dissected owl pellets, discovered principles of physics and chemistry, and tested the theories of engineering by constructing miniature suspension bridges.

Carolyn Blatchley ('92), Field Director for the Hemlock Girl Scout Council, was surprised by the response to the program she called "Science Extravaganza." "We had 67 girls on the waiting list," she said.

Seven Lycoming College faculty donated their Saturday morning

Poli Sci Instructor Puts Theory to the Test

Lycoming College political science instructor, Mary Wolf, has taught political science at Lycoming for 11 years. She has taught "Women in Politics," "American Government," "Congress and the Presidency," "Bureaucracy in Public Administration," and "Public Opinion Polling." Until this year, she has never run for office. In November, she made a successful bid for Williamsport City Council.

"I find that some of the things I have taught in my 'Women and Politics' are true for me," she says. Historically, women in politics have trouble asking for money and not getting enough volunteer support. Mrs. Wolf found that true for herself.

A Lycoming physics student introduces a local girl scout group to the joys of science at Science Extravaganza organized by Carolyn Blatchley '92.

Mary Wolf is putting political theory to the test as a city councillor.

During the fall, she spent an average of 10 hours a week on her campaign, time comparable to preparing and teaching an extra class each week. One added benefit of running for office, Mrs. Wolf has gained a lot of stories for her political science courses.

Internships Up

During 1994-95, 42% of Lycoming College juniors and seniors participated in an internship, a practicum, a professional semester (student teaching), or a clinical (nursing).

Internships at Lycoming College have doubled in the past three years—a combination of student interest and accessibility of employers in Williamsport. Internships are not necessarily the province of business majors. Students in virtually any major can have an internship.

Examples of this include: Dixie Albro, a music major, who worked with and sang with The Gregg Smith Singers at Saranac Lake; Andrea Girio, psychology major, interned at a center for battered women; and Elenore Lubas, an art major, who painted murals for the Lycoming County Housing Authority.

Former Judge Heads up Legal Studies

Judge Thomas C. Raup traded his judicial robe for an academic gown when he became an adjunct professor of legal studies at Lycoming College. Raup, who spent 22 years as a judge in Lycoming County, teaches the political science course “Law and Society” and the criminal justice course “Criminal Justice and the Courts.”

“After the pragmatic life of being a trial judge, I look forward to getting back to theory and the campus and making sense of it all,” said Raup.

The Jersey Shore native is a graduate of Columbia College and Columbia University Law School.

Raup is not new to the Lycoming College campus. He served as honorary chairman of the College’s 175th anniversary celebration in 1987, and, over the years, he has been a frequent speaker at the college.

Lycoming College Students Donate 60 Food Baskets to Shepherd of the Streets

The Student Senate of Lycoming College presented a check to Rev. Kim Scranton of Shepherd of the Streets for $834, enough for 60 Thanksgiving food baskets.

The students solicited contributions from fellow students, faculty and staff. The project was headed by Cynthia Householder, Service Coordinator of the Student Senate.

Lacrosse Comes to Lycoming

Lacrosse will join Lycoming's sports program this fall, bringing the number of varsity sports on campus to 19. Coach Gene Peluso, formerly of Drew University, will coach both men's and women's teams.

Lacrosse is being sponsored as a club team during the spring semester before advancing to a varsity sport during the 1996-97 academic year.

Peluso had been an assistant coach for Drew University's men's lacrosse team for the past year-and-a-half. Prior to that, he was the head coach at McQuaid Jesuit High School in Rochester, N.Y., for three years.

Dean of Student Affairs Ben Hogan and Athletic Director Frank Girardi both said that the idea of bringing lacrosse to campus began last year.

"Last spring, we started to consider it on a recreational level," Hogan said. "Then we began discussions about an intercollegiate sport after that."

Interest in lacrosse was expressed by both current students as well as potential applicants.

The College purchased equipment during Fall 1995 that could be used on a recreation basis.

Girardi expects the addition of lacrosse, to Lycoming's already-expansive athletic program, to be a plus.

"I think it is a positive any time that you can add a sport that is going to enhance the College for the admissions process," he said.

While the sport may not be a household activity in central Pennsylvania, Hogan notes that lacrosse is popular in areas from where Lycoming draws students. He said New Jersey, New York, Maryland, and the Philadelphia-area have programs on the scholastic level.

Collegiately, several Middle Atlantic Conference schools already have the sport in place. Drew and Widener both sponsor men's and women's programs. Scranton and FDU-Madison have men's lacrosse, while Susquehanna has a women's program.

Hogan expects the sport to be a hit on the Lycoming campus.

"Lacrosse is absolutely a growing sport.

From a student-life aspect, it's a fine spectator sport. In addition, one of the exciting aspects for us is that we'll be attracting a different type of student, not only for coming to school, but also for playing for a new program," he said.

FALL SPORTS RECAPS

Football

The Lycoming College football team again put its mark on the national play-offs, advancing to the NCAA Division III quarterfinals. The visit to the postseason playoffs was the Warriors' sixth trip in school history and fourth in the 1990s.

Along the way, Lycoming posted an 8-3 record and gained a share of the Middle Atlantic Conference Freedom League title. In addition, 1995 marked the Warriors' 21st consecutive winning season.

Lycoming took home its share of postseason honors. Sophomore defensive back John Verton headlined the awards by being named to the third team of the Hewlett-Packard Division III All-American Football team. He was also named first-team all-MAC Freedom League and the Downtown Wilkes-Barre Touchdown Club's MAC Defensive Player of the Year.

Junior offensive lineman Michael Downey was chosen the Downtown Wilkes-Barre Touchdown Club's MAC Offensive Lineman of the Year in addition to earning first-team all-league honors.

Junior quarterback Keith Cadden was named the MAC Freedom League Player of the Year as well as to the 1995 GTE Academic All-America College Division District II Football Team.

Warrior coach Frank Girardi was selected as the Downtown Touchdown Club's MAC Coach of the Year as well as the MAC Freedom League Coach of the Year.

In all, seven Warriors were named to the all-MAC Freedom League team. The complete list follows: first team, Keith Cadden, Michael Downey, John Verton, Steve Verton, and Brett Zalonis; second team, Brian Thompson and Tom Ralickie.

Women's Tennis

The Lycoming women's tennis team went 6-3 and finished second in the MAC Freedom League. The Warriors returned to the MAC team tournament for the second consecutive year where they lost in the semifinals.

In the MAC individual tournament, the top seeded doubles team of Kelly Wehrung and Joy Graeff reached the semifinals.

Freshman Umanga deSilva recorded an 8-2 record playing #4 singles, while Wehrung was 7-3 at #1.

In doubles, Wehrung and Graeff finished with a 10-3 mark.

Bryan Kelly

winning its first-ever MAC Freedom League title.

Four Warriors were named to the Middle Atlantic Conference Freedom League all-star team.

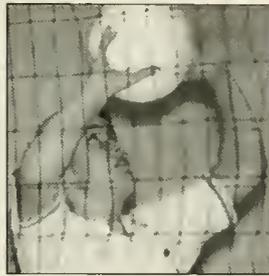

Junior outside hitter Michelle Forney earned first-team honors, while junior Janine Slotter, sophomore Danielle Albright, and freshman Jill Sheeley were named to the second team.

Forney, who was named to the all-league team for the third straight season, led the MAC and was among national leaders with a .474 hitting percentage.

Slotter and Albright were also repeat all-league picks.

Women's Soccer

The Lycoming women's soccer team set a school record for wins by posting a 6-12 overall record. The Warriors finished 2-4 in the MAC Freedom League.

Freshman Jess Forlano led the team in scoring with 11 points, while junior Cindy Tritt was a first-team all-Freedom League selection. Tritt was second on the Warriors' women's team with 10 points.

She scored five goals this season for Lycoming.

Cross Country

Beth McCarthy's sixth-place finish at the MAC Championships highlighted the Lycoming cross country team's performance in 1995.

She also claimed first-place finishes at the Baptist Bible Invitational and the Susquehanna Invitational, where she set a course record with a 19:56.

On the men's side, Nate Gilbert was the #1 runner throughout the season. He finished 28th at the MAC Championships to lead the Lycoming men's team.

Men's Soccer

The Lycoming men's soccer team won its second consecutive MAC Freedom League title and made a second straight appearance in the conference playoffs. The Warriors finished the season with an 11-7 record.

Lycoming came away with five selections on the Freedom League all-star team.

Sophomore Matt Pivrotto, junior Stephen Cramer and senior Eric Szentesy were first-team selections on the men's squad, while freshman Adrian Temple and senior Stan Kadelski were second-team selections on the men's squad.

Pivrotto also garnered Mid-Atlantic Region All-American honors. He was Lycoming's leading scorer and ranked among the conference leaders in scoring.

Volleyball

The Lycoming volleyball team recorded the best season in the program's history by going 22-16 and Women's soccer team set new school records.

20 All-Academic AWARDS

Lycoming athletes made their mark in the classroom as well as in the athletic arena during the fall season.

Twenty Warriors earned spots on the Middle Atlantic Conference fall all-academic teams. To earn a place on the honor roll, an athlete must be at least a sophomore and have a 3.2 grade-point average or better.

A complete list of Lycoming athletes on the conference's all-academic team follows:

Football: Keith Cadden, Matt Cosgrove, Alcides Cruz, and Mike Moyer;

Men's Soccer: Mike Bennett, Mike Bonner, Stephen Cramer, John Nowicki, and Zach Rubinich;

Women's Soccer: Jeanelle Boyer, Beth St. Clair, Kathy Dziejewski, Melani Love, Martha Nolder;

Men's Cross Country: Mike Earle and Nate Gilbert;

Women's Volleyball: Danielle Albright and Jenn Smith;

Women's Tennis: Jenna Hoff and Shannon Miller.

In addition to the conference honors, Cadden was also named to the 1995 GTE Academic All-America College Division District II Football Team.

Alumni Put Up a Fight

Twenty former basketball players entered Lamade Gymnasium January 20th to show the current crop of players a thing or two. In the end, the message was sent that the older legs can still run. However, the current team handed the alumni a 102-87 setback in the inaugural alumni basketball game.

Playing for the alumni squad included Chad Bailey '92, Steve Balakonis '85, Sam Burch '86, Seth Burch '89, Jay Cleveland '88, Steve Cogan '74, Jack Connell '77, Bill Conroy '78, Steve Crawford '88, Keith Fetterolf '95, Glen Hanna '83, Dave Harman '93, Dennis Jakubowicz '71, Paul Jobson '85, Paul Mamolen '67, Tim Marose '93, Bob Martin '95, Mark Molesky '79, Ron Travis '66 and Bill Trump '94.

Clarence "Dutch" Burch, head coach for the Warriors from 1962-94, guided the alumni squad. He was helped by longtime assistant Rees Daneker. Another alumni game is being organized for next year.

Jeff Rauff '72 is one to rarely walk away from a challenge. Chances are he'll run to it.

Rauff, who serves as President of the Warrior Club Executive Committee, is also an avid runner and will take part in the 1996 Boston Marathon.

"I really wanted to take part in the '96 Boston race," noted Rauff, whose first-ever road race was a marathon in 1978. "It is the centennial of that marathon and I wanted to be in it."

Boston Marathon officials will be accepting applications for the centennial marathon which will have an expanded field this year, but Rauff didn't want to take any chances on missing out through a lottery system. He completed the Hartford Marathon this fall in 3 hours, 17 minutes qualifying him unconditionally for the race. It was only the third marathon that he ever entered, although he competed in triathalons for nine years.

Rauff competed for the Lycoming College swim team under his father, Mort Rauff, and even coached the team following his father's retirement. Since that time, Jeff has taken on many challenges. Last summer, he was appointed to the Warrior Club Executive Committee which will aid in enhancing the athletics program at the College through fundraising and special events.

"I have a lot of affection for the College and believe in what the school is doing," Rauff said. "I'm always impressed by the outpouring of affection from athletes, which is evident by the Hall of Fame acceptance speeches every year. It's a very solid bond that shows the impact that the faculty, administration and the coaching staffs have had on our athletes."

Rauff is the first to tell you that getting involved with the College or any community service activity is a large undertaking.

"I have a personal responsibility to get involved with the College and the community," added Rauff. "You don't help with something because you want to earn awards or gain recognition. You have to feel strongly enough toward something to become a part of it, whether it be fundraising or serving on a board. You feel satisfied when you see results."

In addition to his athletic prowess, Rauff has been on the Board of Directors for the Williamsport YMCA since 1983 and served as president on the board for one term. He will return to the board presidency of the YMCA again in April.

"I enjoy being involved in community service," added Rauff, a partner in the Hartman Agency, one of the most successful independent insurance agencies in central Pennsylvania. "Whether at the YMCA or with the College through the Warrior Club, I have a responsibility to give back. As a businessman, I take money from the community so why shouldn't I put some back?"

So what's next for Jeff besides the Boston Marathon, a board presidency and his work with the College?

"It looks like I'll be coaching my daughter's youth soccer team this year," said Rauff, with a big grin on his face. "Family, athletics and community service bring balance to my life. I'm glad I have the opportunity to give back what I can."

Warrior Club

Staying involved with the Lycoming athletic department has never been easier.

The Warrior Club was recently established as a way of getting alumni, friends, supporters and fans more involved in the athletics program at Lycoming College.

By joining the Warrior Club, individuals can keep up to date with all of the College's sports programs, in addition to being part of the "team behind the team."

With a donation of $40 or more, Warrior Club members receive the quarterly newsletter "From the Clubhouse", invitations to Warrior Club events, and a memento.

Money raised by the Warrior Club goes directly to the individual sports or areas that you see fit. Equipment, uniforms, travel expenses, team meals, awards and banquets are all aided by your tax-deductible contributions.

By becoming a member of the Warrior Club, you can help the promising student/athletes at Lycoming in their endeavors on the field or court.

For more information, call Bruce Rosengrant at (717) 321-4136 or send your donation to Lycoming College Warrior Club, Lycoming College, Box 165, Williamsport, Pa 17701.

From the Alumni Executive Board President

Dear Alumni:

The Executive Board of Lycoming's Alumni Association met this past November and welcomed five new members whose time and talent will be greatly appreciated during their three-year term.

At the top of the Board's meeting agenda was a follow-up presentation by Dr. Arthur Sterngold, director of the Institute for Management Studies, and Jeffrey J. Myers '95, a student from his advanced market research course, regarding the Alumni Board's 1995 Alumni Opinion Survey.

The purpose of the survey was to find out how alumni feel about a variety of alumni-related issues. The results will be used by the Board and Alumni office to improve alumni programs. An upcoming issue of the Lycoming College Magazine will contain a summary of these findings and outline our future plans.

Within the next month or so, you will be receiving information about Lycoming College's Alumni Directory from the Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company. Please make sure to complete and return the questionnaire by the deadline so that you will be included in the 1996 issue. This information will also help to update your Alumni office file.

When you purchase your copy of the Alumni Directory, the Executive Board will receive a royalty. This presents a wonderful opportunity for the Board to have funding in support of the goals and objectives of its four committees: Campus Affairs, Student Development, Regional Affairs, and Development. Strengthening our alumni network and interacting with current students to provide career advice are the foundations the Board will build upon in developing this year's events, services, and programs.

Our next meeting is March 22 and 23. As always, your comments and questions about the Alumni Association are welcome and can be directed to the Alumni office at 1-800-345-3920, ext. 4036.

Please accept my best wishes for a peaceful, joyous, and successful 1996.

Help Build Your Alumni Home Page

Now that Lycoming College's campus-wide network is directly connected to the Internet, the Alumni office will be developing its own home page on the World Wide Web. The College's Web site can be reached at <http://www.lycoming.edu>.

This home page will allow alumni to have access to timely information on upcoming local and regional gatherings, Homecoming and Reunion Weekend activities, and other special events. An alumni e-mail address directory and the capability to update your biographical information for our database may also be a possibility.

If you have any suggestions regarding the Alumni office home page, please e-mail Kimberley Kaiser-Anstee '88, director of Alumni and Parent Programs, at anstee@lycoming.edu, or contact the Alumni office at 1-800-345-3920, ext. 4036.

STAND UP AND BE COUNTED

Participation is Everything

As the Annual Fund drive draws to a close (this June 30), your participation is more important than ever before.

Alumni participation in the Annual Fund is one of the criteria used in the U.S. News & World Report college ranking. (This past year, we were 11th, slipping off the top ten list by a fraction of a rating point.)

It is also a yardstick by which many foundations measure our worthiness for educational grants.

Last year, just 33% of our alumni contributed to Lycoming College. On the other hand, the percentage of alumni giving gifts to Ivy League colleges is well over 50% in any given year.

Please help us to improve the percentage of giving over last year. Your check now (in the envelope provided) can make a very large difference.

Annual Fund Makes the Difference

The half million dollars generated through the Annual Fund is money that can be used immediately by the College to meet a number of special needs.

Most of this money goes to financial aid—often making the difference in recruiting a top student or in helping another worthy student stay in school.

Some of the Annual Fund money goes into special programming, helping to finance anything from computer software programs to an expanded Study Abroad Program.

This half million dollars is our margin of excellence, helping Lycoming grow and develop. Over the final years of this century, our goal is to double the Annual Fund to a one million dollar margin of excellence. Your generous donation now will help us on our way to that goal.

How We Raise Money

While we use mail solicitation, we have come to rely on student-run phonathons in the fall and spring. With rising postage costs, this is actually becoming a more cost-effective way of raising money.

Our student callers are usually impressed with courtesy and interest expressed by many of our alumni. Some callers even make note on alumni that may provide insight on a career track.

Many of our alumni feel that this is the easiest way to give to the college because they can use their credit card and give on the spot—no check or stamp required.

We also feel that having our students reach out to alumni is the very best way of telling you what Lycoming is all about.

Adapting to Change

In college, NANCY HALL BRUNNER '52 was editor of the newspaper and the yearbook. She sang in the choir and wrote and produced an original musical comedy in her junior year as a fundraiser. In her senior year, she became the first recipient of the Chieftain Award for outstanding service to the College.

One of her first jobs was in the public relations office of Lycoming College, editing the alumni magazine. Her career evolved at Hoffmann-La Roche Pharmaceutical Company in New Jersey as she moved

JACK SMYTH, CHARLIE LUTY, and PAUL KITNER '34, former College varsity football players, all in their eighties, were together for the first time in 60 years in mid-November 1995. The impromptu reunion came about over breakfast in the Quilted Bear restaurant in Scottsdale, Ariz.

In the football seasons of 1933 and 1934, these three octogenarians played for Dickinson Junior College and Seminary.

It was Paul, age 82, a native of Carlisle, Pa., left halfback on those ancient teams, who instigated the surprise get-together. Paul's wife passed away several years ago. He is living in a small apartment near Reading, Pa. His cousin, Peggy, wed to Rev. Charles Ferrell, retired minister in Mesa, Ariz., invited him to visit. Paul knew that two teammates were living in the Phoenix area. He was able to track down the home addresses and phone numbers of Charlie, 81, and Jack, 80. They had been co-captains of those teams. Charlie was a right end and Jack a right halfback.

When Paul phoned Jack, he learned that he and Charlie, who had been roommates in college, had been having breakfast together on Saturday mornings for the past 20 years. This set up a surprise meeting of Paul and Charlie. Rev. Ferrell brought Paul to the restaurant where Charlie and Jack were about to order breakfast. Both Paul and Charlie admitted that 60 years made a difference. They would not have recognized each other if their meeting had been casual.

Charlie came first to Arizona in 1947 from Ridgway, Pa. Jack, a native of Renovo, Pa., came in 1970, 23 years later.

from Corporate Communications to Sales Training to Manager of Organization & Human Resource Development. While moving up and through the corporate ladder, she pursued a master's degree in behavioral communication at New York University.

Having made a series of career changes, Nancy developed a model to manage career transitions which she has presented in workshops. These achievements earned her the TWIN Award conferred upon women achievers in New Jersey Industry. "I have never truly departed from my liberal arts frame of reference for living," she says. In 1981, she joined Lehn & Fink Products Group of Sterling Drug as manager of training and development where, among other things, she introduced computer literacy for managers and professionals.

Brunner is still working at full-speed with two jobs: as an adjunct professor at Fairleigh Dickinson University as well as a private consultant. In fact she is teaching a special "Saturdays" course for FDU, comprised of four 8-hour sessions from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

A Good-Time, Toe-Tappin' Band

When Terry Wild '68 and Doug Banks '68 began entertaining Williamsport audiences back in 1965 with The Billtown Jazz Quintet, they probably never imagined that 30 years later their passion for music and friendship would be just as strong.

Today, the five-member Morgan Valley Road Band — officially founded in 1974 — performs over 40 shows a year at concerts, fairs, and festivals throughout the mid-Atlantic States. Each member brings his own unique musical style to the band: Terry — cornet, trumpet, and vocals; Doug — piano; Steve Hulslander '74 — guitar, banjo, and vocals; Dick Hill — bass; and Lou Feist — percussion; as well as Park Williams, sound technician. "I was anxious to try to get a band going," recalls Terry. "We started getting together at my barn and studio on Morgan Valley Road and that's how I came up with the band's name." He comments further on the history of the term "road band" for those musical groups of the 20s, 30s, and 40s that traveled around nightclub circuits, better known as speakeasies.

While The Morgan Valley Road Band does quite a bit of traveling, they are a family-oriented type of entertainment with an eclectic repertoire. "I really don't know how to describe our music," laughs Terry, "but we call it an old-time swing, razzmatazz ragtime, barrel-house kind of style wrapped up in a quintet."

The band's three alumni all pursued different majors while at Lycoming — none of which were music. Terry studied English, Doug biology, and Steve history. Their careers have, in turn, taken them in different directions. Terry owns and operates a commercial photography studio, Doug is employed by the City of Williamsport in the Department of Parks and Recreation, and Steve is an elementary school teacher at the West Branch School in Williamsport. Additionally, drummer Lou Feist has been an adjunct faculty member in Lycoming's Music Department.

Terry has taken on the responsibility for keeping the band organized and managing the performance schedule which is almost like a part-time job.

What started out as a hobby for Terry has become a very meaningful part of his life and for those who share The Morgan Valley Road Band spotlight. "I feel very strongly that each year there has got to be a little progress in order to get a little more exposure for the band."

At the Helm

Four years after graduation, Daniel Stephen Jones '75 left his job in Philadelphia as district advertising manager of the Farm Journal and sailed off in his 26-foot Buccaneer sailboat, "The Serendipity," bound for the Bahamas.

The six-month sabbatical found him dodging hurricanes in the Atlantic, but it taught him a self-sufficiency that has come in handy in running his own advertising, marketing and public relations consulting firm. He founded his own company, Serendipity International, in 1986. In 1990, after ten years in marketing with Kimberly-Clark, he became a full time consultant with a variety of clients that range from capital financing and leasing entities to travel agencies.

Although he still keeps his boat on a lake north of Atlanta, Dan realized another long-time dream in 1987 when he earned his pilot's license with a perfect score on the FAA exam.

Jones is now a southerner by marriage, having married Judy Kemp, "a true southern belle," in 1980.

Like many in Atlanta this year, Jones is helping with the Olympics. As a member of A-COG (Atlanta Committee on Olympic Games), he will be coordinating the logistics of the swimming events, taking care of such details as the two tractor-trailer loads of computer paper needed for record-keeping for just these events.

In addition, he will be helping to coordinate a number of auxiliary events being put on by the Chamber of Commerce of Roswell, the Atlantan suburb in which he lives.

Commitment To Value Earns Success For CSR

How did J. Scott Reed '86 turn $5,000 into a computer firm that annualizes over $5 million in sales? Through a winning combination of hard work, dedication, and knowledge.

As president of Computer Science Resources, Inc. (CSR), Scott has made his company a leader in the design and implementation of networked and PC business systems. Based in Williamsport, with a branch office in State College, CSR is one of the fastest growing microcomputer firms in Northeastern Pennsylvania, maintaining a 100 percent compounded annual growth rate for the past six years. "CSR is focused on providing a single-source solution to our customers through systems integration, programming services, education, hardware support, and product fulfillment," boasts Scott.

Reaching this step did not come without hard work and dedication. Before he graduated from Lycoming, Scott went into business with his father developing software for investment businesses. Unfortunately, this venture ended up losing money and was dissolved in 1989.

Soon thereafter, Scott decided to start his own business selling computers in the Williamsport area.

"The first thing I did with my $5,000 savings was to automate the books and the contact management prospecting and order processing so that with fewer people we could execute a larger volume of orders," says Scott. But giving the impression of being a larger business was quite a challenge. "A company would call, for example, and if it was a technical question I would say 'Just a moment, let me transfer you to our technical department' and then I would put my hand over the receiver and tell the technician to grab the other phone. In unison, we'd put one phone down, pick up the extension, and he'd say 'Technical support'."

Today, CSR employs more than 20 people and continues to succeed in the marketplace. "Our success can be attributed to, first, our quality people and, second, the systems that are put into place," he explains. "I invest a lot of money in our internal software and hardware systems so that fewer people can execute a larger volume of orders."

On February 1, 1996, Scott started a new company, UpLink, that is an Internet service provider which is experiencing growth beyond that of CSR.

"Lycoming provided me with the basic building blocks for running a business. I just had to figure out what to do with them."

Judging by CSR's success, Scott knows exactly how to run his company.

From RA to Account Services

ANN LESLIE SHIELDS-YOUNG '87 has time on her hands—lots of broadcast time which she buys as a media broker and

Vice President/Account Services of Universal Media in Mechanicsburg. The company is among the largest media buying companies in Pennsylvania.

The former Chieftain Award winner is also on the Board of Directors of the Central Pennsylvania Ballet, on the Advisory Council of the Harrisburg River Boat, a member of the Central Pennsylvania Republican Committee, and a member of Women in Advertising.

She is perhaps proudest of her involvement with the MIA/POW fund-raising program of the Veterans of Vietnam. She became interested in the project, which funds educational seminars on the Vietnam War as well as contributing to the families of veterans, through her husband.

"I will definitely admit that the majority of what I learned at Lycoming came from life experience not from books," says Ann, although she is quick to add that she had a very positive experience.

Her experience as an RA, probably more than anything else, prepared her for her professional career. "You learn that in a crisis you cannot lose your cool," says Ann. "In those situations, an RA needs to figure out what the person really needs and how to meet these needs, skills that are essential in dealing with clients."

Ann has been at Universal Media for nine years. In 1991, she married Don, one of the partners in the company. Although the birth of Taylor Ann Young in 1993 has curtailed her business travel, she remains very active in her career and community.

The Political Scene

Robert V. Martin '95 interned with State Rep. Tom Dempsey last year.

ROBERT MARTIN '95 (political science) is continuing his political hopes and dreams. At Lycoming, Martin became the first President of the newly organized student government, the Student Senate of Lycoming College (SSLC).

"Being the President of the Student Senate taught me how to handle people and network. I am using these skills in my current job as a fund-raising manager and political analyst," said Martin.

Martin is working as the Political Fund-raising Manager and Political Analyst for the Middlesex County Democratic Organization in New Jersey. His main job is to manage funds to use for the political races of the local mayor, the local state assembly and senate members, the local sheriff and county clerk. The yearly funds are raised from companies and private contributors. In 1995, the Middlesex County Democratic Organization raised an estimated $1 million.

"I get money from private contributors and companies, and then that money is distributed to people who implement it to buy television spots, radio spots, and much more," said Martin.

He works side by side with the Democratic national and state committees as well as local congressmen planning fund-raising events for Democratic candidates.

Martin holds leadership positions in his community as well. He is a member of the Democratic Leadership and a member of the Young Democrats. In these organizations, he helps out with political campaigns with door-to-door solicitation.

He hopes that his work with local organizations like these and his experience as a fund-raising manager and analyst will help him to expand his political aspiration. He would like to work for an elected official or be elected as a political official himself.

"Mary Wolf was my main force in guiding me to my political aspirations. She encouraged me to pursue a political career."

In Martin's spare time, he works at a sports clinic for his local community, tutors, and teaches basketball to the youth.

"The youth of America are very important," he explains. "They are our next generation and I want them to have the same opportunities that I had."

In Search of . . .

Lycoming College Alumni

Have you ever tried to get in touch with an old classmate, only to find that the last address you have in your telephone directory is 8 years old? Well, your troubles are over. Soon an impressive directory of our alumni will be available to help you locate all your old friends.

The new Lycoming College Alumni Directory, scheduled for release in September/October 1996, will be the most up-to-date and complete reference of over 11,000 Lycoming College alumni ever compiled! This comprehensive volume will include current name, address and phone number, academic data, plus business information (if applicable), bound into a classic, library-quality edition.

The Alumni Office has contracted the prestigious Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc., to produce our Directory. Harris will soon begin researching and compiling the information to be printed in the Directory by mailing a questionnaire to each alumnus. (If you prefer not to be listed in the Directory, please contact the Alumni Office in writing as soon as possible.)

The new Lycoming College Alumni directory will soon make finding an alum as easy as opening a book. Look for more details on the project in future issues.

Looking for Vietnam

Can anyone supply names of Lycoming alumni who were killed in Vietnam?

In addition, the editor would like to hear from alumni who were either actively involved in the anti-war protest . . . or who actually served in Vietnam.

Second notice: If you have already responded, thank you.

WANTED

Reunion Chairs, Committee Members and Class Agents

Please make plans now to return to campus for Homecoming '96 on October 4 - 6. The Office of Alumni and Parent Programs has started making plans for class parties and events to be held during that weekend. Your input is needed. Michael Schweder is the chair for the Class of 1971 and Malena DeMore Pearson and Melissa Lyons are the chairs for the Class of 1991. Chairs are still needed for the Classes of 1946, 1951, 1956, 1961, 1966, 1976, 1981 and 1986.

If you think you may be interested, please call Kimberley Kaiser-Anstee '88, the Director of Alumni and Parent Programs, at (800) 345-3920, Ext. 4134, for more details.

If this Homecoming is not a reunion for your class, but you are interested in acting as a Class Agent, please call Kimberley Kaiser-Anstee '88 at the above number. Class Agents share news from their classmates with the College and let their classmates know about what's going on at the College.

Give

Stock to Lycoming

American taxpayers can make charitable gifts of stocks and bypass capital gains taxes, in effect using paper profits to help reduce federal and, perhaps, state income taxes. Plus the charitable gift is eligible for an income tax deduction at its fair market value at the time it is given as a gift.

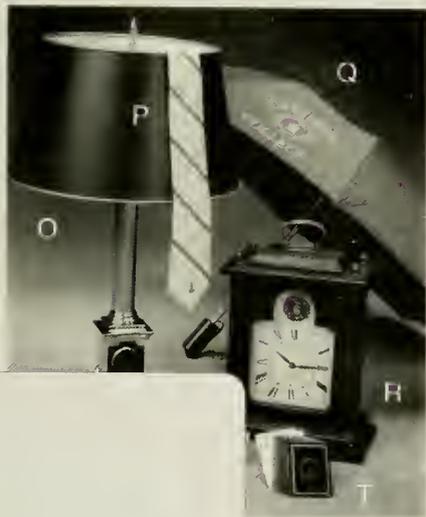

Many investors see a charitable gift of stocks as a way to divest themselves of unwanted stock at minimal cost to themselves—and benefit a worthy organization.

Please note: stock certificates must be turned over to the College. Selling the stock first will result in capital gains tax.
