FOREWORD

The DART is to us of the graduating classes of 1946 a scrapbook of memories. We have tried to put into these pages the best from our days at Dickinson so that, after we pass through the gateway of school into a world at peace, we may glance backward and cherish the remembrance of happy days.

DEDICATION

TO

ALBERT A. DICKASON

We, the Dart staff of 1946, gratefully dedicate this our book of memories to Albert A. Dickason. He has been a loyal friend through our two years at Dickinson and has, in our opinion, contributed the most to our extracurricular activities as well as to the high esteem with which the Junior College is held by the people of Williamsport. But, more than mere fun and reputation for us and for our school, he has contributed, through the education in drama and in good sportsmanship which he has so willingly given to us, to the development of the character and personality of all of our classmates who have worked under his magnetic guidance.

President's Message

Members of the Graduating Classes of 1946:

It is a pleasure to extend greetings and write a brief message for your yearbook.

I need not remind you of the importance of the year which is nearing its close. Events of world significance have been of almost daily occurrence. While few have been untouched by these things, for the most part you have been occupied with the daily assignments and associations of the campus. World events often seem remote. The future will reveal how sensitive you have been to world happenings and how well your fidelity to assigned tasks has prepared you for your part in the future.

You entered Dickinson before the turning point in the war was clearly discerned. During your first year many of the college activities were either curtailed or stopped altogether. You returned this year, especially the members of the college class, greatly outnumbered by the incoming freshmen. You loyally maintained college customs and traditions. You have seen, during the second semester, the return of the veterans and the enrollment reach an all-time high. As you go out you realize our beloved college faces a future full of promise. By holding steady and doing your part you have helped to make all this possible. Our thanks to you and our best wishes and fervent prayers that the future may be filled with achievement and peace of mind.

Most sincerely,

J. Milton Skeath, Dean

Dean's Message

A word from one who has admonished and encouraged during the years you have spent at Dickinson. What should college have contributed to your growth? Among other things there should be broader intellectual horizons, increased sympathy and respect for men as men, an awakened sense of social and civic responsibility. In these three areas of mind, personality, and society, there is a possibility of synthesis into a fourth, which might be realized in the ideal or the spiritual.

September 1944. We were in college for the first time. Everything was new and strange to us — a new home, new people — so different and so much nicer than high school.

We had hardly had time to get our balance when Freshmen Week arrived. We were miserable, but we loved it. The girls lost all of their glamor with pigtails, straight hair, no make-up, and horrible color combinations. The boys lost their dignity with bow ties, clothes worn backwards, and socks and garters. The climax was a picture of all of us in this beautiful attire which graced one of the local newspapers.

Members of our class soon became very active in the extracurricular work in clubs. Many of us joined the Dramatic Club and helped in the production of its numerous shows. Some of our other members helped organize the Debating Club and were a part of its schedule of public appearances. Still others of us helped this year to form the Science Club, the newest on campus. We helped with the Greater Dickinson Banquets, with the Religious Activities Committee, with the Dormitory Councils, and with the revival of the Dickinson Union which has formed the foundation for next year's school paper. The publication of the 1946 Dart was the biggest venture of our class.

All in all our record at Dickinson is represented in most of the articles found in this book so there is no need to list any more of them. It is enough to say that hardly any activity took place on campus which did not see at least some of the present Sophomore Class taking an energetic part.

Although the ending of our last year at Dickinson was marred by the destructive flood which hit Williamsport on May 28, and forced cancellation of our Class Day program, the Baccalaureate and Graduation Services were impressive. That there were many close friendships made within the class was proved by the larger than usual number of sad farewells when the exercises were over and the time to go home finally came. But vows were made by most of us to come back for a reunion at the next Greater Dickinson Banquet.

CLASSES

Freshman Class History

On September 17, 1945, a happy group of green students of assorted shapes and sizes arrived on the campus of D. J. C. We were to be converted into the Freshman Class 'ere many weeks had passed. We represented many well-known states—with some of us from as far away as Michigan and New Hampshire. In spite of the air of bravado which we attempted to assume, we were all a little scared inside as we thought of the coming year.

The minute we arrived on campus, the Sophomores took us in hand, showed us to our rooms, and introduced us to our roommates. In fact, we found the Sophs quite likable people, that is, until Freshman Week. It seems that they had been eagerly awaiting this event just as we are eagerly awaiting the chance to inflict the same torture upon next year's Frosh.

After entertaining all of Williamsport for this one week, we enjoyed the easy informality of the Chestnut party. It was held at Mountain Beach this year and we were all so well acquainted after it was over that we could call almost everybody around the school by his first name.

We had settled down to the routine of school work by this time. We enjoyed the regular evening dances in Bradley Hall, and the fun we had at this time helped us to get at our work when the study period came the next hour.

Thanksgiving brought us the first vacation when we could go home as members of the college crowd. Then, almost before we realized it, it was Christmas. It snowed a lot just before this vacation began, and most of us had visions of being snowed in instead of going home. But we were far too busy with the Christmas pageant and keeping up with our work in classes to worry too much.

THE FRESHMAN CLASS

After the Christmas vacation, the semester tests left all of us a little bit out of breath, but the girls, at least, got their breath back when they saw all of the new boys in the classes for the new semester. Those Ex-GI's certainly helped out the manpower situation on campus.

Activities as well as school work filled the long period until the Easter vacation left us free to go home again. The Campus Thunder Show of the spotlight players used many of the people in our class and provided some needed recreation for all of the students. Club activities filled many of our evenings and made us enthusiastic enough to make plans for the renewal of the same club work next year.

All too soon for most of us, the end of the year rolled around. It meant saying sad good-byes to the members of the Sophomore Class, many of whom we would not see again. But it is our promise to them that we will do our best to uphold the traditions of Dickinson which they have continued so well under the difficult wartime conditions. Memories of our friendships made at Dickinson will endure long after others have been forgotten.

PREP CLASS

Preparatory Class History

In September, 1945, we the Preparatory Class had our grand opening at Dickinson Junior College. Registration day revealed an interesting and energetic group of boys and girls eager to start an adventure away from home. To most of us, being away from home was an entirely new experience.

The first task of the girls, now located in the new dormitory in Bradley Hall, was to organize a student council. In previous years we were housed in the college dormitory and didn't need a council of our own. With Elsie Smith as our president, we found that by the end of the year our council had proved a very successful organization.

At the beginning of the second semester our class increased in number. Among the new members were some Ex-G. I.'s whom we were especially glad to welcome.

Our study hall's silence was usually broken every night by the ringing of the telephone and by Sally Luken's mad dash down the hall to try to be the first one there to answer it.

In the boys' dorm things went along quite well, except for the bull sessions which continued into the wee hours of the morning or for the noisy passing of a freight train every half hour of the night.

As far as extracurricular activities were concerned most of our members entered in wholeheartedly with the college program. They joined the college clubs which were open to them and were active in dramatic productions.

In May we suddenly realized that our days at old D. J. C. would soon be at an end. There are many memories of the months at Dickinson that we shall always cherish. It is with a strong feeling of affection and sorrow that we pass on to the classes of 1946 and 1947 all of the joys and successes which we have achieved here.

The 1946 Dart

Since it is customary for the write-up of the yearbook, no matter what yearbook it may be, to begin with a long list of the obstacles which the staff has had to clamber over, this is certainly no time to start being original for this year the list hit a new record in length. We began our difficulties quite appropriately with a two month long search for a printer who would promise to have the book out for us in time for graduation (a promise which did not hold water). Then came a far worse difficulty in the form of financial trouble which always seems to plague something of this sort. Troubles within the staff itself followed when the members found that they had gotten into more work in activities than they were able to do on their class work. Troubles . . . troubles!

But nothing can be all trouble. Through all of the blackness the staff worked always with an eye on the goal—a book which will serve as a stepping stone to memories when, in the future, it is opened by some grad from the classes of '46 and causes him to look backward for a moment to these golden days" as students; a book which will prove to be the best ever published by the classes of Dickinson. We hope we have succeeded in producing a true scrapbook of memories, if we have failed it cannot be said that we did not try.

THE UNION STAFF

The Dickinson Union

A new venture with our class was a new and different Dickinson Union. For many, many years the literary Union was published monthly; but this year, after several years of non-publication, our class sponsored a newspaper which was published every three weeks. The purpose was to give students the inside news of college events, to provide training in journalism for interested and talented students, and to provide a means of spreading information about events at our college to other campuses and interested persons.

The Class Officers appointed the Editor-in-Chief. Stanley Knock, who in turn selected the other members of the staff. The organization functioned smoothly, and the paper received student recognition in a very short time. However, due to the lack of proper financial backing, the paper was suspended near the end of the year. The Union, however, has proved a major accomplishment of our class. A basis was laid for a real newspaper for the Junior College in the years to come. The Dickinson Union will continue to be the voice of the student body.

The Upsilon Pi Delta Debating Fraternity was founded in 1944 by some members of our class along with some from the class of 1945. The purpose of the group has been to spread knowledge of current events and of those events concerning primarily the students of the social sciences. Meetings were often in the form of discussions and were designed to stimulate creative thinking on the part of the members. Special consideration was given to political questions of world and national importance. Teams were formed within the club so that the members could learn the mechanics of debating. When the technique was mastered the trams gave exhibition debates before numerous organizations in the surrounding area.

This year brought a number of new members into the group. They soon found places in the social and intellectual program of the fraternity, and, although only one public appearance was given, the year has truly served in that it has eaused the members to look behind the headlines of the newspapers in this important time of the world's history when the clear thinking of the coming generation can either make or break the future.

Highlights of each of the years have been the impressive initiation services for new members who are admitted after either delivering a speech before the club or preparing a research paper if this is the field of activity in which they are interested, and the banquets which serve as the chief social function of the club's year.

The Choir

A variety of entertaining programs marked another successful year for the Dickinson Junior College Choir. There were a number of girls enrolled under the excellent leadership of Professor Frederick Stevens, head of the Music Department. Following the first rehearsals with a study of several Christmas numbers, the Choir was ready for its part in the Christmas Pageant on December nineteenth.

During the initial weeks of the second semester, several Ex-GI's joined the ranks of the choir. At this time the efforts of the group were turned toward the preparation of music for the Greater Dickinson Banquet.

The Choir has provided a great measure of cultural benefit to the Campus and has given the members not only training but a new insight into one of the finest things of life—Music.

The Science Club, newest on campus this year, was organized in order to promote a general understanding of all fields of science and to co-ordinate the knowledge of science with that in other fields. This was accomplished under the able leadership of Mrs. Mabel Bauer, head of the Chemistry Department.

During the year the club had varied and interested programs. Among these were several films, a lecture on bakelite by Minnette Massey, a lecture by Martha Brown on the preparation of glass, and a report by Richard Jones on radar technique. On one occasion Mrs, Bauer gave a very enlightening lecture on the atomic bomb. After the lecture the bomb's relationship to the world in its present condition was discussed.

The meetings showed the members that they could "enjoy as they learned." All those particularly interested in some field of science found a place for the application of theories already learned in classes, and all of the members found a new joy in the study of science.

Sophomore Tribunal

Fall of 1945 found us Sophomores and eager to avenge the suffering which we had endured last year at the hands of the upper classmen. The lordly tribunal met several times and, after great deliberation, compiled a list of rules and regulations for Freshman Week—the Freshman's bible.

For one week early in October we majestically walked the campus among the bowing and scraping freshmen. We saw them as they really were with their natural beauty brought out by pigtails, clothes worn backwards or inside out, and unaided by make-up on the girls.

A gathering at noon each day in front of the gym touched off the miserable activities for the Frosh. A number of "hikes" through the shopping district gave Williamsporters a chance to view the clever costuming of the Freshmen for each particular day. At an extra-special parade the boys, wearing skirts and sweaters for that day, used the police signal box in Market Square for a Maypole dance.

Penalties for violations of rules and insubordination to their majesties, the Sophomores, kept classes in an uproar when people without explanation suddenly began to sing or ring bells. A touching Romeo and Juliet act was performed from the upper window of the gym. The gym steps glistened in the autumn sun after a brisk scrubbing with the toothbrushes of two unlucky souls.

But on Friday night the Frosh were allowed to come back to normal for the "Hobo Party" which ended the week with square dancing and fun for all. Freshman Week had meant more than a chance for the Sophs to show their authority on campus. It had given us all an opportunity to get better acquainted and had provided the Frosh, who had even more fun than we did, with a good way to gain confidence in themselves as they fell into step with campus life.

The Dramatic Club, after a three years' search for a new name, this year decided on "The Spotlight Players." The Club's great success has been largely due to the leadership of its adviser, Albert A. Dickason, and his able assistant, Jean C. Yocum.

During the '44.'45 term, many members of our class joined the club and helped with the outstanding productions of that year. They worked on the first Mardi Gras, a campus carnival. They acted in "The Christmas Letter," a pageant which drew enthusiastic acclaim from the press. The second edition of "Campus Thunder," a sparkling variety show, profited from their efforts. The term ended with a number of our classmates playing roles in "Craig's Wife," George Kelly's Pulitzer Prize winning drama in a modernized version against a new dark green setting. A picnic celebrated the play's success.

The '45-'46 season opened with a second Mardi Gras and its advertising parade through the downtown area. A Mardi Gras Queen was crowned at midnight.

"The Chimes Ring Tonight" was the sequel to the 1944 original pageant. It brought the soldier hero home from the Pacific to his mother.

"Campus Thunder III" reached a new high for campus productions at D. J. C., becoming the most successful in school history. Featuring an original book and original songs by the advisers, the show had to be repeated three times for a total of five performances before the enthusiastic audiences could be satisfied.

The Spotlight Players, the most active organization on campus, has furnished an opportunity for members to learn all phases of theatre and radio work through actual experience in campus production broadcasts, and in novelty programs presented by members for groups in nearby communities. Using money earned from productions, the Players themselves designed and remodeled a studio and little theatre suite in Bradley Hall as a club project this year. These rooms are used for meetings and rehearsals, and the graduating members hope that they have provided a place for the little theatre productions of the club of the future.

The climax of the ambitious year came when the members spent a week-end in New York. They saw examples of all types of theatrical productions, even visiting backstage the cast of a Broadway hit play. With this gala event the community's only producing dramatic club closed a year of activities which can be described only by use of a word which is the dramatist's stand-by

As the present college term draws to a close, we find the Religious Activities Committee of Dickinson Junior College completing one of its most successful years. This term, more than ever before, the members were united in an effort to realize the social and spiritual values in fellowship. We also saw how important it was to create throughout the student body a feeling of "good-will at all times." A visit of Dr. Mc-Phearson and Dr. McGannegal, from Nashville, Tennessee, made us more than ever conscious of this spirit.

Under the direction of the Committee, aided in an invaluable manner by the Reverend W. H. Gould, Lenten worship services were held every Wednesday evening in the Chapel. The group also conducted a campaign for the World Student Service Fund. A chapel speaker, posters, and handbills helped bring in the students' contributions to make this another success of the year.

All in all, the Religious Activities Committee has reached its goal. It has shown the major importance of religion in the student's everyday life, and it has tried to bring about more perfect religious tolerance on the campus.

ATHLETICS

Dedication

To the Memory of

WILBUR JACKSON STENGER

(March 28, 1928-October 12, 1945)

The Staff of the 1946 DART proudly dedicates the Sports Section to the Memory of Wilbur Jackson Stenger whose loyal support of athletics and school activities during the few short weeks he spent on campus as a member of the Freshman Class won for him a permanent place in the hearts of faculty and students alike. The son of a Dickinson aluminus, Rev. Harry C. Stenger, and Mrs. Stenger, his sudden, tragic death came as a great shock and a deepfelt loss to all of us. His pleasant smile and friendly co-operation reached everyone on campus and caused the members of the basketball teams to request that he be given a place beside their own in the form of this dedication. All of us feel fortunate to have known him even for such a short time.

Basketball

With the return of many veterans to the Campus of Dickinson Junior College. Coach W. H. Gould had more men turn out for the teams than there have been for several years because of the war-time manpower shortage on the school grounds. Among the boys on the team were: Don Crossley, Jim Shoalts, Tony Rotundi, Roland Decker, Dick Crossley. Dick Fredericks, Jack Coleman. Bob Keener. Pat Harder, Bob Mundell. Dave Best, Domonic Albrunzo, and Jim Smith. Much of the basketball credit for the year should be given to Coach Gould for his untiring efforts to give the College a worthy team and for his realization that sports are for character building as well as for body building.

The members distinguished themselves for their ability to work together as a team and individually as fast passers and excellent ball-handlers. Although the team had seven defeats to six victories, the point scores added up to only ten more for their opponents than they were able to make—557 for the opponents for the entire season and 547 for our boys. The fellows showed a love for keen competition but also good sportsmanship to those whom they played against—one of the highest objects of athletics at Dickinson. The team showed an excellent quality when they took their defeats with their heads held high and a proud determination to do better. It was this quality that kept the students and faculty members coming back to the games again and again.

The Cheerleaders must not be forgotten when we talk of athletics. It was their work which gave to the contests a unity of spirit and which helped stimulate the interest of the spectators in a game even before it began. All in all, a great start for post-war athletics has been made this year. The credit for this start must go to the Ex-GI's who have returned to the classrooms with just as much interest in sports as they had when they left for the Army or the Navy.

Intramural Sports

The fall program of outdoor sports for girls included softball, tennis, and soccer. Many exciting games were held during the girls' gym classes. In fact, in the early fall the girls were not content to enjoy gym work in the classes alone but had to get outdoors to play tennis among themselves at every opportunity.

When the weather grew too cold for the outdoor activity, the girls moved inside to the spacious, well-equipped gymnasium to participate in volleyball, basketball, dodgeball, and relay races. They used the classes to develop a proficiency in these sports which the less talented had had no chance to develop in high school. The pool came in for its share of use at this time, too, and this use continued until the very end of school. The boarding girls took advantage of every chance on warm early summer evenings to enjoy a cool swim.

The warm spring days caused the doors of the old gym to burst open behind the weight of the girls as they poured out into the sun to continue their tennis and softball. On rainy days they stayed in to howl or play badminton.

The boys' physical education classes followed about the same pattern as those of the girls except for the increased stress on basketball. The boys also did their share of exercises under Coach Gould and made use of the pool just as much as did the girls. They, too, played a lot of extra-curricular tennis. Curtailed sharply during the war, the mens' program grew rapidly to its position of campus importance before the year ended.

DICKINSON BLUES

I've got those Dickinson Blues,
Dickinson Blues
Lonely as the dickins with the Dickinson Blues
That melody
Brings memories,
Of all those days I spent at D. J. C.

For I remember Campus Thunder,
Gee, what a show,
The night we went a-skatin' in the park in the cold,
The Mardi Gras,
The Campus Ball,
And mistletoe at Christmas in Bradley Hall.

And after dinner at night,
Dance in the lounge,
And the dormitory where the cake made its rounds.
I'm goin' 't pack,
I'm goin' back
And rid myself of all those dog-gone Dickinson Blues.

— Albert A. Dickason and Jean C. Yocum From CAMPUS THUNDER III (1946)
