

Honeydrippers plan tour

By Betsy Reynolds

The Honeydrippers are going on tour after all. The group consisting of Robert Plant, Jimmy Page, Jeff Beck, Brian Steizer, Nile Rodgers and Josie Powell will start the tour in London and then come to the states. But the Honeydrippers are only expected to perform at a few places.

Columbia pictures will release The Bride this spring. The movie stars Sting and Jennifer Beals. In the meantime, Sting can be seen in the film, Dune which is to be released December 14.

Yes the bill has been passed! The Pennsylvania State House has officially declared Bruce Springsteen as the boss of rock and roll.

Speaking of Bruce Springsteen, he and Red Rockers recently met in Denver where the two tours intercepted. Springsteen took the Red Rockers to a post concert party where he said that he was considering performing with the band on stage. For someone who does not endorse bands that is quite a compliment to the Red Rockers.

General Public will soon be appearing in a movie starring Jane Seymour and Eddie Albert. They are supposed to sing "Don't Cry on My Shoulder." The film is being made in Toronto, Canada.

Billy Squire is a little upset with the video Rock Me Tonight. He claims

Rock Star
-BRUCE SPRINGSTEEN

that the video makes him out as a "teeny bopper" which he feels has alienated the young male audience from attending his concerts. In this respect, he is losing a lot of "much needed" money.

Duran Duran, Paul McCartney, Spandau Ballet, Phil Collins, Boy George and many others are recording a Christmas album together. The album is entitled Feed the World and Let Them Know it's Christmas. The album's proceeds will benefit the starving people in Ethiopia.

Speaking of Boy George, he and Cyndi Lauper have nothing in common except the fact that they will be appearing on a new Saturday morning show entitled Images starting in January. Believe it or not, Images is about makeup. That's right; they will show us how to take care of our skin and what makeup is good for your skin type.

John Cafferty of the John Cafferty and Beaver Brown Band has given the platinum album he received from the soundtrack Eddie and the Cruisers to his parents. Cafferty says he has a lot of respect for his parents and thought that it would be the perfect gift.

Gregg Kihn will be releasing a new album in February entitled Citizen Kihn. It is said to be better than any of his previous albums.

Sheena Easton's next video will be out very soon. The new video, entitled Swear is the second off her latest album.

Trivia

Congratulations go to Jeff Stein of Elkins Park, Mike Taylor of Elkins Park, and Lizanne Amici, who correctly answered last week's trivia question. The question was: Who was the first guest comedian to appear on NBC's "Saturday Night Live?" The correct answer was Lily Tomlin.

Great Christmas savings!
