"Don'ts" For Hubbies Text of His Sermon

Preacher Follows Commandments to Wives
With Advice to Men

AS a sequel to the ten commandments for wives, the Rev. Albert Marion Hyde, of Porter's Church, Brockton, Mass., gave his congregation ten don'ts for husbands. These are:

Don't forget to leave your little courtesies and gentle kindnesses at some hotel on your wedding trip. You will need them on the remainder of your life journey.

Don't unbosom yourself about your family troubles to your neighbor, your partner, your partner's wife, your stenographer, your college friend, member of your club or even a brother or sister in your church. These sacred confidences spread like thistledown and bring forth fruit just as prickly and disagreeable.

Don't arrange for your second marriage before your first wife is dead. A strenuous life must not be allowed to encroach too much on our matrimonial affairs.

Don't support the wife and children of the saloonkeeper at the expense of your own wife and children.

Don't have nervous prostration when your wife asks you to go out with her for an evening to her musicals or club, or to her friends, or even to a church social. It is hard on a woman to be a grass widow all the time.

Don't make your wife a stranger to your checkbook, although it may be true that she reads most of the other books of the household. It will do her good to read the checkbook, too; she is not a hired servant; she is the partner in the business.

Don't make your wife a pack horse, harnessed to the kitchen stove, wash-tubs and mending bag. The eight-hour man with a sixteen-hour wife needs to unionize his home.

Don't carry all your religion in your wife's name. You will not be able to realize on it here or hereafter.

Don't forget the fact that the decalogue of Moses is still on the statute books. It is intended for husband as well as wife.

Don't forget that the happiest spot on earth is your home. Your wife may not be an angel. You would be lonesome with her if she were. Angels would be hard to live with; wives are much better. Live in the home sunshine and be worthy of it.

Anger Makes Men Sweeter, He Says

WHEN a man is angry he is "sweeter" than at almost any other time, according to Dr. W. B. Cannon, of Harvard, who read a paper at the convention of the American Physiological Society held at Baltimore.

This interesting condition, the doctor explained, is due to a greater demand for sugar on the part of the muscles concurrent with an outburst of anger. He said he had experimented with animals, but that the same results would follow in a human being. Any kind of emotion, he said, would produce a large amount of sugar in the blood.

On the Job.

Pa—I greatly disapprove of that young Smithson, and one particular reason is his lack of industry in his calling.
