

You R Welcome, Oyster Dear

Once again the toothsome raw box,
Once again, the broil and stew,
The large fry and the steamed ones,
Ah, 'tis too good to be true!
Absent through the long, long summer,
Missed by all men---that is clear---
And now once more to us coming,
You R welcome, oyster dear.

We are Selling Barrels of Oysters

The high cost of living can be combatted to a great extent by making a more frequent use of Oysters

Gerberich Farm Sold

Real Estate in East Hanover and Union Townships Bring $4321

THE Francis B. Gerberich farm in Union and East Hanover Townships, 139 acres and 102 perches in extent, was sold at auction last week to Harrison J. Gerberich, of East Hanover Township, for $30.25 an acre, or $4224. A tract of wood land, 7 acres and 72 perches, was sold to same buyer for $13.10 an acre, or $97. Maria E. Gerberich, the widow, is administratrix of the estate. She will move to Jonestown. Wm. W. Walter is attorney for the estate. R. J. Emrich was the auctioneer.

In an opinion handed down by Judge Henry the motion of the Franklin Fire Insurance Company of Philadelphia, for a new trial was dismissed. The Company was sued by the County of Lebanon for insurance it carried on the Court House, and which the company refused to pay on technical grounds after the fire in 1908. Saturday Nov. 18, was the third anniversary of the fire. The amount sued for is $6276.06, including interest.

The case will be appealed to the Supreme Court, without delay. At the trial last January, when a jury returned a verdict for the above amount in favor of the county, Attorney Eugene

D. Siegrist, the County Solicitor, and Attorney Howard C. Shirk represented the county. Attorney Simon P. Light represented the insurance company. The verdict was reached on January 23.

Socialists Gain in County

The Official Count of Votes Shows Large Gain in Country Districts

THE official computation of the vote cast in this country at the election on November 7 shows the vote of the Socialists to have been larger even than claimed by the officers of the party's county committee and indicates pretty clearly that in future contests for county offices the strength of this party must be reckoned with. The Socialists have gained immensely in the last half dozen years, having practically doubled their vote in the county in four years. In 1908, after having gone along with 400 or 500 votes for years, the party surprised every one by polling almost 800 votes and at several elections for county officers has gone close to 1,000.

The official figures show that one Socialist candidate, Taylor, who ran for county auditor, received 1,909 votes. He was the highest on the Socialist list, the others standing, Boeckler for recorder, 1,873; Hoover for director of the poor, 1,787; Greiner for county treasurer, 1,704; Crissy for coroner,

1,656; Zimmerman and Stephenson for county commissioners, respectively, 1,675 1,658; Marzolf for register, 1,603; Fasnacht for sheriff, 1,545; Landjs for district attorney, 1,597; and Radford for director of the poor, 1,477.

The returns show that every one of the candidates on the Socialist ticket got over 1,000 votes in the county outside Harrisburg, Taylor getting as high as 1,288. In Harrisburg the party strength was manifestly on county officers and ranged from 450 to 621, although Updegrove, who ran for controller went up to 704.

The Socialists have always been strong in Highspire and Middletown, but they demonstrated strength this year in Williamstown and Lykens, both of which districts had been worked hard by the fusionists, and also gained in Steelton and Hummelstown, while they showed their strength again in the Thirteenth Ward, Harrisburg which has been their stronghold.
