

Theatre Planned on Main St. Site

Motion Picture House, Bowling Alleys Proposed; Would Be Operated By Company

Lititz will have a new and modern moving picture theatre if a proposition now under consideration by D. W. Withers and a leading moving picture and theatre concern of the East is brought to a successful conclusion, it became known yesterday.

The theatre would be built on the site of the Hudson-Essex Garage, on East Main Street, and work would be started as soon as the present lease on the building expires, December 31. The plans also include the building of a bowling alley in the basement of the building.

If the plans are carried through, the present building would be torn down and rebuilt and outfitted as a theatre by the moving picture company. Exits would be provided on both Cherry and North Alleys.

Everything in connection with the project has been agreed upon except the duration of the lease. Mr. Withers asks a ten-year lease, while the company wishes a six-year one with option of renewal for four more years.

Five Rothsville Homes Robbed

Thieves entered five homes in Rothsville Saturday evening, according to County Detective Jacob Weller, and escaped with cash and various articles of jewelry.

At the home of Charles Musser a gold watch and chain, several gold rings and a .32 calibre revolver were stolen, and at the Homer Adams home the thieves secured a gold watch and chain, a woman's wrist watch, several rings and a small amount of money. Skeleton keys were used to enter, Detective Weller learned.

Several rings were stolen from the John P. Raybold home, by the thieves, who escaped without being seen, however. At the home of Edward Kraft, next door to Raybold, Kraft's return scared away the robbers who had just broken a window pane to gain entrance.

At the home of F. F. Bailey, a child's bank, containing a nice sum of money, was stolen.

The Adams and Musser homes were entered between 8:30 and 9 P. M., and the two other places some time later, Detective Weller said.

The costumes and make-ups were excellent. Prizes were given for costumes as follows: Most Original, Margaret Souders and Charles Wagaman; Prettiest, Mrs. Clifford Heltzer, and the Most Comical, Russell Longenecker.

After you have finished reading the Red Cross colored supplement in this week's RECORD don't throw it away—save it, and put it in your window so that others may see that your home is with the Red Cross and their splendid work.

The Red Cross is the one organization that knows no creed nor color; it asks no questions as to one's politics; it serves all sections in every emergency need.

Altogether 79 disasters called for Red Cross help and money during the year just closed. Aside from the terrible drought, which required services of volunteer workers numbering more than 60,000, and a drought relief fund of more than $15,000,000 of which $5,000,000 came from the national Red Cross treasury, help was given in 22 fires, 13 tornadoes, 8 storms and 8 floods, 6 forest fires, 4 earthquakes and 4 air explosions, 3 typhoons and 3 epidemics, 2 cloudbursts, and 1 each hurricane, mine cave-in and railroad accident.

Aside from a major catastrophe such as the drought, when the whole public was asked to contribute funds for relief, Red Cross relief in these disasters was met from the organization's funds and from special contributions. Part of each membership, subscribed to Red Cross Chapters at the roll call period from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, goes toward this important work. Contributions are solicited but once a year, unless in the event of a national calamity such as the drought was last year.

The Red Cross drive in town begins on the 16th and ends on the 24th and is included in the Lititz Community Chest drive. Anyone giving one dollar or more is entitled to membership in the Red Cross and receives a card receipt of same from the solicitor.

Dr. Prince Gives Armistice Address

Plea For Peace Heard By 700 At Legion Service In Lititz High School Auditorium

Think of your obligations and not so much of your rights, was the Armistice Day message of Dr. Leon C. Prince, Dean of the Law School of Dickinson College and member of the State Legislature, when he addressed more than 700 people in the High School auditorium Sunday night. The occasion was the annual observance of Armistice Day by Garden Spot Post, 56, American Legion.

Nations and individuals must give up their rights, not surrender them, and think of the obligations each has to his fellow man, Dr. Prince declared, and he added that when that is practiced, the tramp of marching men and the roar of artillery would seldom disturb the peace of nations.

All churches of town co-operated in the service, and the various ministers each had a part in the program. The Rev. H. J. Kline announced the numbers of the program, Rev. J. C. H. Light pronounced the invocation; Rev. J. Harold Mumper read the preamble of the Legion Constitution; the Rev. Rev. Crosland read an appeal of the Lititz Community Chest, and the Rev. Geo. B. Raezer pronounced the benediction.

Two fine selections were sung by the Moravian choir, the High School Orchestra rendered several numbers at the start and the Legion color guard advanced and retired the colors at the beginning and end of the service. Taps concluded the program.

Community Chest Seeks $5000 Here

Annual Drive For Funds Will Open Monday; Report of 1931 Work Given

With a goal of $5,000 before them, solicitors will begin the annual campaign for funds for the Lititz Community Chest on Monday and during the week following will visit every house in town and in the immediate vicinity.

While the quota to be raised is higher than the amount collected last year, it is believed that the Chest will need every dollar of the $5,000 for work this winter.

Details of the campaign, as well as plans for the coming year and the election of directors featured the annual meeting of the Chest Thursday night. It was reported that of the $4,000 collected last year, all but $1,000, which was sent to the Lancaster Welfare Federation, had been used at home. The contribution to the Lancaster agency was for the hospitals and the Red Cross and again this year a certain part of the campaign proceeds will be sent to that place.

The bulk of the money raised this year will be used by the King's Daughters, Community Nurse, Legion and Milk Fund for charity work as was the case this past year.

There is scarcely any necessity of telling the people of town how important the drive is this year, for it is believed that there will be many times that food, clothing and nursing attention will have to be provided for families here. Both cash and pledges will be received, the pledges being payable at the discretion of the giver. Let us all help, no matter how little we feel we can give, for this worthy cause.

The following persons were elected members of the Chest board at the meeting: Mrs. Mary M. Dengate, Miss Sophie Bricker, Miss Mary Huebener, E. M. Leaman, E. E. Eby, John Miller, J. R. Johnson, M. C. Demmy and E. H. Risser. They will organize at the January meeting.

The following resume of the year's work was read by Miss Huebener, the secretary, at the annual meeting:

The total amount raised by the Lititz Community Chest, in cash and pledges, in the annual drive last November, for carrying on its work during 1931, amounted to $4,081.74, of

Farm Calendar

Feed For Increase—Liberal feeding of a ration high in protein for two weeks before breeding will put sows in good physical condition. Experiments show that handling brood sows in this way increases the size of the litter 10 to 20 percent.

Allow Pullets Air—Ample ventilation should be provided for the pullets after they are moved to the laying house. They have been accustomed to plenty of fresh air in open colony houses, range shelters and trees. Fall colds are the result of faulty ventilation.

Kill Orchard Pests—Protect apple trees from mice by using a poison bait.

Control Crop Costs—Cost of production and higher yields per acre are within the control of every farmer. High acre yields generally reduce cost of production and need not increase total output, as fewer acres can be planted.

Train Foals Early—Training the foal should not be postponed until the animal is broken as a 2 or 3-year-old. The foal should be taught subordination at the very start and not allowed to become willful or headstrong. Break to use of halter early; be kind and patient. A foal responds quickly to the treatment received.

Grow Locust Posts—Fence posts always will be needed. A perpetual supply can be provided by planting black locust seedlings. In 12 to 15 years a planting of this species will yield an adequate supply of the best post material.

O. HENRY'S ROMANTIC BAD MAN THE CISCO KID Serialization from Fox Picture with WARNER BAXTER and EDMUND LOWE

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Sergeant Mickey Dunn of the cavalry is on the trail of the Cisco Kid again across the deserts of Arizona near the Mexican border. He catches sight of him the first day, but loses him and goes into Carrozo for a night of drinking. There he discovers the Kid is in back of the main saloon making love to Carmencita, the beautiful Spanish entertainer.

Chapter III

BILLY BENTON, a tow header youngster of about seven, and his tiny sister Anne, who was not yet five, were swinging under a tree half way between the ranch house and the barn when the Cisco Kid rode slowly down the hill.

The Kid's horse was weary and drooping. The Kid was slumped in his saddle, his chin resting on his unbuttoned vest. As his horse stopped at the gate which crossed the ranch driveway the rider slumped out of his saddle and fell to the ground.

A wide stain on his left shoulder showed that he had been wounded by Dunn the night before.

Billy was the first to notice the fallen rider. He dashed into the kitchen to get his mother. Mrs. Benton hurried to the prostrate figure. She was a young woman, hardly more than thirty, and a striking brunette. It was a bit incongruous that she should be known as the Widow Benton.

After a quick examination she ordered Billy to get help in the house and had the Kid carried into a bedroom. Half-conscious, he murmured: "Gracias! Gracias!"

While the Kid was being cared for by Mrs. Benton, Sergeant Dunn and Privates Dixon and Bouse were in conference at Carrozo. Bolstered by his overwhelming conceit, Dunn figured that he could coax Carmencita into telling him in what direction the Kid had gone.

He told Dixon and Bouse to wait for him, saying: "I got some private business to attend to. You two can go. I'll pick you up here, if I ever need you again."

Dixon's feelings were not hurt by this thrust. "You better hurry up, or we'll have all the beer in the place lapped up."

"Yeah!" Dunn exploded. "Well, then I'll switch to sarsaparilla." When the Sergeant arrived at Carmencita's house she was playing one of those old fashioned phonographs with tin horns and cylindrical records. She did not hear him enter.

"Hello, chili pepper," he called nonchalantly. "Hello, Mickey." Her manner was easy. He thought she was in the mood for flirtation and pulled her down onto his lap.

"You come here early," she cooed, stroking his glossy hair. "Couldn't sleep all night." "He explained—"insomnia, I guess." "That's too bad." She was sympathetic. "Not to get enough sleep."

"Oh, I wouldn't mind, if it wasn't for the Commanding Officer," he told her. "You see, me and the Colonel sleep together because he's scared in the dark." He held her tightly. "Come here, sweetheart, give Big Casino a great big kiss. Say, how'd you like to go back to New York with me?"

It was the chance she was waiting for to put him off the trail. Hesitantly, as though she were letting him in on a secret, she told him: "He is far on his way to California."

Dunn was pleased with his own cleverness.

"California? Much obliged, honey." He picked up his dusty campaign hat. "Well, so long chili pepper. I got to be going now, but just in case you get lost, I'll show you that when it comes to lowin', the Cisco Kid's a rank amateur and Mickey Dunn's the champ. Adios!"

Carmencita smiled.

Days passed at the Benton ranch and the Cisco Kid gained strength rapidly. He was already a prime favorite with the children. His songs, his guitar playing, his constant good nature endeared him to them.

By the end of the week he had taught them the words of his favorite song:

"I sent my girl to the city And I sent my girl to the town And my girl, she's young and she's pretty And she's ready to settle down."

"Sing some more," little Anne urged as they lolled on the porch shielded from the brilliant desert sunshine. "Sing about the little cockroach."

He chuckled, ran his fingers through his curly hair and resumed:

"Girls are gold—married ones are silver Widows are copper—old maids tin The cockroach, the cockroach can't walk any longer Because it has no—it has no marijuana to smoke."

Mrs. Benton came out of the house—cool, smiling, charming in a light house dress.

"Here's a widow, but she isn't made of copper."

"No, Bileto," the Kid resumed, addressing Billy, "your mama is much better than even gold. This I have found out these last few days, and but for her, Bileto, I would now be one dead Don Juan Chicuelo." He reacted and lifted little Anne to his lap. "Ah, I think I take Anita with me when I go. Would you sell her to me, Bileto? She is so pretty, and I love her so much."

"Aw, you don't want her," protested Billy. "She's got freckles."

"Freckles—little specks of gold—gifts of the sun to make little Anita more precious. No, Bileto, men they have right and they have die and starve to find these little specks of gold, when the sun have hide them. The good sun who have give all life have turned his sunshine and his sunbeams into little specks of gold on Anita's pretty cheeks."

Mrs. Benton smiled. "That was a lovely speech, Senor. I never thought that you were a poet."

"Poet? Poet?" His surprise bordered on amazement. "Ah, no—no, I am not a poet. I am just a plain business man."

"What kind of business, Tio?" she asked seriously. "I don't know." He shrugged. "I change. Sometimes in the cattle business—sometimes in the mining business and sometimes in the banking business."

Mrs. Benton tried to lead the children away.

"Now, children, don't bother Senor Chicuelo any more, she admonished. "They don't bother me," he assured her. "I'm all right now. But for my shoulder I'm—I'm so strong as before. Maybe tomorrow I go. My friends, I have send for them."

As he had predicted, Gorrito and Lopez rode down over the hill in the morning, shouting greetings from a distance when they saw him.

Mrs. Benton heard their shouts and joined the Cisco Kid on the porch. "Is coming my friends—Gorrito, the little fat one, and Lopez, the skinny."

"Have them remain for food," she suggested. "I'll tell Marie to prepare something."

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

In his pursuit of the Cisco Kid across the Arizona desert, Sergeant Mickey Dunn and two cavalry privates have lost the trail and have gone to Carrozo for a night of drinking. They encounter him there, unexpectedly, making love to Carmencita, one of the dancing girls.

Dunn shoots at and wounds the Cisco Kid as he flees in the darkness, but again loses him. In the morning Carmencita sends Dunn and his companions in the wrong direction by telling them the Kid has gone to California.

In the meantime the Kid recuperates at the ranch of the Widow Benton and becomes the idol of her two young children. At the end of his convalescence he says good-bye to his two friends, Gorrito and Lopez. They have just arrived with a letter.

Chapter IV

WHILE they waited on the porch for Marie to prepare food they exchanged greetings and Gorrito, speaking in Spanish, told the Kid all the news of the pursuit of Mickey Dunn and his fellow cavalrymen. When Mrs. Benton had gone inside, Gorrito quietly slipped a letter to the Kid.

He read with a blend of surprise and pleasure. When he had finished he turned to his friends.

"Funny—this Carmencita she tell Mickey Dunn the Cisco Kid have go to California—and he is go there—but when he come back there is danger. It is funny. And she also say she love me better than her life. Why not? Other women have—so why not Carmencita?"

"Surely," agreed Gorrito. "You are hungry, Gorrito?" asked the Kid ironically. He knew Gorrito was always hungry.

Without waiting for a reply, he led the two men into the kitchen where they could amuse themselves flatteringly Marie. An open doorway separated the room from the dining room. As they ate, they heard little Billy's high pitched voice saying: "What's the matter, Mom?"

"Oh, nothing dear." It was Mrs. Benton's voice. It sounded as though she were on the verge of tears.

"Don't worry—it'll come out all right," Billy assured her. "I hope so, Billy—but I am afraid that—"

She was still speaking when the Cisco Kid pushed his chair back from the table and strolled into the dining room. "Is something the trouble, Bileto?" he asked sympathetically.

"Well, there is," Billy told him, "but I don't think Mom would want me to tell a stranger."

"Stranger? Ain't I your uncle?" Billy saw the situation in a new light. "Well, I guess you are the same as one of the family. He became confidential. "You see, when Daddy was killed by the cattle rustlers a couple of years ago, he owed Mr. Hankins at the bank five thousand dollars, and now Mr. Hankins writes that he's coming to take the ranch away unless Mom pays him."

The Cisco Kid's face hardened. He put his hands on Billy's shoulders. "Him—Hankins! This fellow Hankins is a crook, Bileto—this I know. Five thousand dollars, you say? Bileto, I—I think I go to Carrozo pronto."

He hurried into the kitchen and wounded Gorrito's feelings by ordering him to stop eating immediately. In a few moments the three men were hurrying away toward Carrozo.

While the days were passing peacefully at the Benton ranch, Sergeant Dunn and Privates Dixon and Bouse had been plodding wearily toward the California border. They had searched together and separately without finding a trace of the Cisco Kid and had come together again for another conference.

Dixon was for calling off the hunt, but Dunn was irritable. After a half hour of conversation Dixon brightened. "Say Sarge, I got a great idea."

"Yeah?" Sergeant Dunn was derisive. "Where did you get it? If you ever got an idea you'd be down with brain fever."

Dixon protested. "Oh, say! I've been thinking of this for two weeks and it came to me all of a sudden like—you know—like an inspiration."

Dunn grinned. "Cut out the six-bit words and get down to cases."

"Well this came to me just like a flash, you know. I says to myself, this Carmencita girl is in love with the Cisco Kid—all right—we go back to Carrozo and you make love to her and she tells you where the Kid is holed out."

"That's a fine idea of yours, Private Dixon—a fine idea. Original, too. You know you're in the wrong trade—you'd make a fine detective—but just now you're lacking two thirds of being a half detective."

Dunn thought for a time and decided to split up the group and continue the search separately. Dixon's idea appealed to him more than he wanted to admit, but he wanted to go back in the direction of Carrozo alone.

"Come on—you got your orders—come on—get going you two and stop chewing the fat." Sarcastically he added: "And don't forget what I told you—don't take up with no stragglers and if you get lost don't ask the way of anybody but a policeman."

Dixon made a sound with his pipe that in later years was to become known as the razzberry.

"Cut that out," ordered Dunn curtly. "Toward now the following day Dunn rode up to Widow Benton's ranch. Marie was bending over a washub.

"Ah, senorita," he called, "you are beautiful." She stood up and turned toward him. He changed his mind quickly, but before he could say anything further she dashed into the house calling: "Soldiers!"

Mrs. Benton came out on the porch and greeted Dunn with a smile. He was impressed immediately by her fresh young beauty.

"I'm Sergeant Dunn from over at the Fort," he told her. "Can I wash up, I'm pretty dirty."

A half hour later he sat down to a luscious steak broiled by Marie, and began to feel that he had inadvertently strolled into the edge of Paradise. He even burst into song as the children gathered about.

After they had asked him many questions about life in the Army, little Anne suddenly asked: "Can you sing The Cockroach like Uncle Tio?"

"Say, if I ever started to sing" Dunn protested, "I would drive all the cockroaches to drink."

Anne was disappointed, but she was persistent in her childlike way. She examined the plain flannel shirt and trousers of his uniform and prattled on: "Your suit isn't as pretty as Tio's." Dunn was startled. He pushed his chair back quickly.

"No? Well, what's his like?" "It's got silver on it." He would have questioned her closely, but Billy interrupted.

"Come on Anne, let's go out and see if his horse is as good as Tio's." He hoped to be able to get some information from Mrs. Benton, but changed the subject discreetly.

"It must be wonderful to have a couple of kids around like that," he suggested.

"Life here wouldn't be bearable without them," she spoke earnestly. "Say did you ever hear—a Mexican bandit around here?"

"Mexican bandit?" Her surprise was genuine. "Yeah! Cisco Kid, they call him. He's the worst outlaw that ever operated around here—holds up banks, trains, haciendas, anything—and don't care nothing about killing people who get in his way. I been on his trail for about two weeks."

"But isn't that dangerous, Sergeant?" "Dangerous?" He was boastful. "Say, lady, Mickey Dunn gets fat on danger. Now, this Cisco Kid is the worst killer that ever held up a bank in the west—but when he heard that I was on his trail, he just naturally evaporated. He must be a thousand miles away from here by this time, or I'd of had him long ago. That hombie knows when he's well off."

They strolled out into the ranch yard. Billy was inspecting Dunn's horse and singing:

"I sent my girl to the city— And I sent my girl to the town— And my girl, she's young and she's pretty."

Dunn was startled. It was the song he had heard the Cisco Kid singing the first night of his pursuit.

"Hey, son," he demanded a bit roughly, "where did you hear that song?" "It's Tio's song," explained Anne. "Tio means uncle in Spanish. He has been staying with us."

Dunn's face was a study. "Where is Tio now?" he asked. Anne, totally unconscious of anything unusual, rambled on: "He left for Carrozo a couple of hours ago." "Carrozo, huh?" Dunn ran toward his horse and set off at a fast gallop. (To be continued)

THE CHEST DRIVE

Again comes the appeal of the Lititz Community Chest for funds. Beginning Monday and for one week, solicitors will call at your door. Give what you are able, but don't turn them down without giving something. We people of Lititz are only solicited one time during the year for charity work, so before you act think it over and give until it hurts. It is likely that the need will be greater this winter than at any time since the World War.

A portion of the money collected in town will go toward the support of the three Lancaster hospitals and the Red Cross while more than two-thirds of it will stay in Lititz for local welfare work and the support of our Community Nurse.

RARE DAYS

Perhaps the shortening of the daylight hours has something to do with it—rarely always enhances appreciation—but just now it seems that not even the days of late June or early July ever had quite the golden essence of exhilaration packed into their long hours that has filled the first few days of this November. The air has been almost constantly spiced with that tang of chill which belongs to November at its best. The sky has been that deep, indescribable blue which is no longer dust-hazed nor yet frost-flecked and icy, a blue which typical autumn clouds have only enhanced. But the sunlight has been, perhaps, the choice treasure of all. Not the sunlight of August which sears and scorches, nor yet the sunlight of January which is so often an icy mockery, but a mellow sunlight that warms the spirit more than the body.

Small wonder that the leaves go skittering toward the horizon at the first touch of breeze on such days as November has brought. The man into whose spirit such sunlight has crept is tempted to seek the same misty horizon. Spring fever can't hold a candle to the restlessness that comes with rare November days.

COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVE

which $1,000 was sent to the Lancaster County Welfare Federation to be divided among the three hospitals and the Red Cross.

The bulk of the work of dispensing the funds in Lititz was carried on by the King's Daughters as in the past. Upwards of fifty families in the Borough received aid through the King's Daughters and the Community Nurse. Between 250 and 300 orders of groceries were distributed, many of them in the form of weekly allowances at one or another of the local stores; also about fifty tons of coal, in addition to bread and clothing. One of the Circles of King's Daughters conducts a second-hand clothing exchange, and supplied the needs of many families during the year without cost to the Community Chest, buying only those garments and shoes which could not be supplied through gifts. This Circle would appreciate donations of discarded clothing for men, women and children, which should be sent to Mrs. P. F. Snyder, Spruce Street. A kitchen range was donated by one of our citizens in response to an appeal by the Chest published in the local papers.

In addition to the work of the King's Daughters and the Community Nurse, the local American Legion received an appropriation from the Chest to augment their own funds used in bringing relief to Legionnaires and their families who were in need of assistance.

All these organizations are anxious that every case of need in town should be taken care of, and would appreciate having any brought to their attention which may have been overlooked.

Last January a Milk Fund, for supplying milk to babies and small children in needy families, was organized through the instrumentality of Mr. William Phillips. This was administered by a committee composed of members from the various churches. It was intended to be distinct from the Community Chest, supported by voluntary contributions, but by the middle of May it was found that it was impossible to support the Fund in this way, and the work was taken over by the Community Nurse. Since taking it over, a total of 1932 quarts of milk have been distributed.

The Community Nurse has attended 166 patients during the year, making a total of 1516 nursing visits. She also conducted 20 free baby clinics and made 48 ambulance calls for local doctors, besides 33 investigations of families reported in need of aid.

The Board has decided to hold the drive this year, as last, at the same time that the County drive is held—November 16 to 24—so as to take advantage of the publicity campaign put on by the County organization; and it bespeaks the co-operation of all those who may be asked to aid in soliciting, as well as a hearty response to the solicitors from all the citizens of the Borough.

LOSING HER WRAPPER

Miss Perfecto—Oh, Mr. Cigarette, turn your head away. I'm losing my wrapper!

Revenge!

"I am surprised your mother consents to your marriage with Eric when she hates him so."
 "That's just the reason. She wants to be his mother-in-law."—Passing Show.

The Girls Nowadays!

Girl—The heck with a career. I'm going to get myself a boy friend.
 Music Instructor (pleading)—But, my dear, your art is so promising!
 Girl—Sure, but I can't use it for breach of promise, can I?

His Scheme Failed

"I suppose your wife believes everything you tell her."
 "Atas, no! I tell her that she's perfect, but you should see the hills she runs up for cosmetics and beauty treatments."

All Wet

"Sir," said the poet, "I shall find another channel for my verses in the future."
 "That's right," said the ever-contrite editor. "Have you ever thought of the English channel?"

For Crying Out Loud

Husband—My wife is having hysterics! Can you let me have something to quiet her?
 Neighbor—Sorry, old man, but I haven't got a cent!

Rainfall

The weather bureau says that condensation centers, or nuclei, are essential to the formation of clouds, and therefore of rainfall. These nuclei may be dust particles, especially of certain kinds, such as salt, or even, it is believed, molecules of certain sorts that have great affinity, as we say, for water. The air always contains an abundance of such nuclei, so that all that is more than to meet the demands for them is the probability of rain.

Our Everyday Cares

The everyday cares and duties, which men call drudgery, are the weights and counterpoise of the clock of time, giving its pendulum a true vibration and its hands a regular motion; and when they cease to hang upon its wheels, the pendulum no longer swings, the hands no longer move, the clock stands still.—Longfellow.

Wouldn't That Be Too Bad?
It would be just too bad for the divorce lawyers if instead of friend wife working so hard to improve her bridge game and friend husband spending so much effort to improve his golf score, they both would devote all their energies to improving their married life.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

World's Swiftest River
The River Rhone, which is generally regarded as the swiftest river in the world, attains a velocity of nearly 40 miles an hour in certain parts of its course.

How They Get That Way
A pessimist may be that way because of the optimists who owe him money.—Hamilton (Ontario) Spectator.

Big Footprint
A dinosaur's footprint on exhibit at the American Museum of Natural History is 39 inches long and almost 3 feet across.

Measuring Rainfall
No specific amount of water is required to fall in order to be designated rain. Rain means the falling of any drops of water from the clouds. The amount is measured by exposing a suitable gauge in a position where it will catch approximately the full amount of water that falls upon the surface at the point in question.

Step Beyond Recall
"To cross the Rubicon" means to take some step from which it is not possible to recede. The Rubicon was a small river separating Italy from Cisalpine Gaul, the province allotted to Julius Caesar. In B. C. 49, when Caesar crossed this stream, he passed beyond the limits of his own province and became an invader of Italy.

TURN YOUR SPARE TIME INTO DOLLARS!

Amazing Profits! Fascinating Work! Spare Time or Full Time!

RAISE SILVER FOXES

World's Most Valuable Fur-Bearing Animal

If you're looking for a way to add to your income, if you want a hobby that is both interesting and profitable, if you're anxious to get into a business that will repay you handsomely for your time and effort, then be sure to investigate silver fox raising. Hundreds all over the country are already engaged in this fascinating industry, but fur authorities claim "the market can easily absorb FIVE TIMES as many high grade skins as are now available." Fashion demands more than FORTY MILLION DOLLARS' worth of these beautiful furs every year!

SILVER FOX PELTS BRING FROM $40 TO $400!

You need never worry about a market for your silver fox furs. Silver foxes are seldom caught in the wild state, so the fashion centers of the world must depend on those raised in captivity. Silver fox furs cannot be successfully imitated—this keeps the prices of the genuine furs high. There is a constant demand for all the silver fox furs obtainable at the N. Y. Fur Auctions.

WE START YOU and FURNISH FULL INSTRUCTIONS

There's nothing complicated about silver fox raising. Women can raise them as well as men. Little space required, little attention. Foxes are fed only once daily, a simple easily prepared ration. We will help YOU get started in this fascinating highly profitable business. We supply pedigreed breeding stock and full instructions on feeding, housing, etc.

PRICES OF BREEDER FOXES ARE NOW LOWER THAN EVER BEFORE

You owe it to yourself to learn about this unique money-making opportunity. What others are doing, YOU can do. We'll send you illustrated booklet and complete information—without a penny of cost to you. MAIL COUPON TODAY. This announcement will not appear again.

IT COSTS NOTHING TO INVESTIGATE!

Do You Know

- that any man or woman, without experience, can build an income of from $1,000 to $10,000 per year with silver foxes?
- that silver foxes breed the first year?
- that one pair produces from two to seven pups yearly?
- that silver foxes breed for 10 to 15 years?
- that silver fox furs are the highest priced furs known?
- that one authority estimates it is possible the silver fox industry will in time equal dollar-for-dollar turnover that of the automobile industry?
- that Fashion demands yearly more than $40,000,000 worth of silver fox furs?
- that authorities claim the market "could easily absorb five times as many high grade skins as are now available"?
- that a bulletin of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture says: "probably no other live stock enterprise pays larger returns for the money invested"?
